PRICE FIVE CENTS

PRESENTED WITH PURSE.

Hallowe'en Party of King Cove Boat Club of North Weymouth At Club Headquarters Last Saturday Night a Gala Event. Ladies Auxiliary Present Club With Purse of $100.

Hallowe'en was gaily observed by the King Cove Boat club at headquarters in North Weymouth last Saturday evening when nearly eighty members and their wives and friends enjoyed a delicious turkey supper and Hallowe'en party. The clubhouse was tastefully decorated with black and yellow streamers, hung from the center of the ceiling in the form of an immense canopy and pumpkins, witches, ghosts, black cats and other fall decorations were also used in the pleasing scene. The tables were decorated in Hallowe'en style. The center of the head table had a large tank of water in which was a miniature reproduction of Boston Light with sail and rowboats, also wild ducks and geese. At each place was a napkin folded in the form of a rowboat with a small pennant of the club in the bow.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Boat club served the supper, the waitresses all being dressed in white with Hallowe'en decorations. At 6.30 o'clock the gala party sat down to the delicious menu of viands, with President L. H. Culley and Mrs. Mildred Morgan, president of the auxiliary at the head of the table and Vice President Edgar Hayden Jr. and Mrs. Hayden on their right.

After the supper the club was presented with a purse of $100. by Mrs. Mildred Morgan, in behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary. After Mr. Culley and the other members present had accepted the gift and complimented the ladies on their ever present efforts to assist in the club's doings, Hallowe'en games and dancing were enjoyed until a late hour.

Mrs. Lester Culley was in charge of the supper committee, the entertainment was under the direction of Mrs. Charles Abbott and her assistants, and Mrs. Mabel Heibek looked after the decorating, with telling effect. The party was listed as one of the most enjoyable of the year.

KING'S DAUGHTERS UNION.

Meeting Held In Congregational Church Parlors Last Thursday Night of Much Interest.

The King's Daughters Union, including all the circles of King's Daughters in Weymouth, met in the parlors of the Congregational church at East Weymouth, last Thursday night. The president of the union, Mrs. Benjamin S. Lovell, presided. Reports from the treasurer, Mrs. E. P. Hunt, and secretary, Mrs. W. M. Tirrell, showed that $200 had been given to support of the Pond Home, and that the membership had been largely increased. The county treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Fenno of Wollaston, gave an account of the work and expenses of the Pond Home. It was voted to hold religious services, one Sunday each month, at the Weymouth Town Home, for the next five months. After the business meeting, there were refreshments served by the Golden Rule Circle of East Weymouth.

SUNDAY NIGHT FORUM.

Address on "Real Meaning of Socialism" at the Church in Lincoln Square by John Spargo Last Sunday Night, Large Audience in Attendance.

A Sunday Night Forum service, under the auspices of the Community Service union connected with the First Baptist church of Weymouth, was held on last Sunday evening in the auditorium of the church before a large audience. Miss Emma Clapp presided at the organ and gave several selections. John Spargo of New York, socialist author, was the speaker of the evening and described in an interesting address "The Real Meaning of Socialism." Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Slack of Boston sang. Rev. Chester J. Unerhill, pastor of the church presided and conducted the devotional exercises. Rev. Arthur Mercer, pastor of the Universalist church dismissed the congregation.

Prize Essay Judges Named.

Announcement is made by the National Security League from its headquarters in New York city, that President Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, former President Cyrus Northrup, of the University of Minnesota and Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard, have consented to act as judges to select the best essay on the wisdom and necessity of preparedness for national defense, for the prize of $500 offered by Mr. Jules S. Bache of New York.

250 AT CONVENTION.

First Congregational Church Entertains Norfolk East District Sunday School Association.

The most successful convention ever held by the Norfolk East District Sunday School Association, Rev. J. Hamilton Woodsum, East Milton, president, was the twenty-first annual convention held in the First Congregational church, East Weymouth on Tuesday of this week.

The whole program was a most elaborate affair and showed that much work had been put forth by the officers of the association.

The afternoon session began at two o'clock, Rev. W. M. Newton of the local M. E. church opening with a prayer.

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read by Rev. T. E. Gale of South Braintree.

The first address was by Miss Katherine C. Bourne on "Why Not Now?" Following this, H. S. Conant gave an address on "Four Essentials in Sunday School Work." R. L. Wiggin, Superintendent of Schools, Braintree, had the main address of the afternoon, his theme being: "The Home, the Church, the Sunday School and the Public School as Co-operative Agencies in Religious Education."

The session closed with a Consecration service in charge of Rev. C. J. Underhill of Weymouth.

The evening session began promptly at seven o'clock with department conferences in charge of Rev. Mr. Mays of Roxbury.

At eight o'clock, the general session was opened with a prayer by Rev. Arthur Mercer of North Weymouth.

The election of officers for the ensuing year followed and Rev. J. H. Woodsum of Milton was chosen president; M. P. Hayward of Quincy, J. E. Myers of Braintree and Robert S. Gilmore of North Weymouth, vice-presidents; Rev. Tyler E. Gale of South Braintree, secretary and treasurer; Rev. H. L. Howard of Randolph, supt. adult dept.; Rev. A. D. Smith of Milton, supt. teachers' training dept.; Mrs. C. B. Hall of Wollaston, supt. elementary department; Miss R. L. Chamberlain of East Milton, supt. teenage dept.; Miss L. C. Tower of Cohasset, supt. of home dept. and Frank E. Loud of South Weymouth, auditor. The executive committee elected consists of Rev. G. G. Squire of Hull, John Russell of Quincy, Thomas Davidson of Atlantic, Rev. C. J. Underhill of Weymouth, J. E. Hatch of Hingham, L. C. Williams of Weymouth and Rev. W. Stanley Smith of Holbrook.

Following the election, the main address of the convention was given by Rev. L. J. Birney, D. D., Dean of the Boston University School of Theology, his theme being "The Supreme Aim."

A supper was served to the delegates at six o'clock by the Friendship Circle, K. D., Mrs. Edward T. Ford, chairman.

VETERAN PRINTER DEAD.

Mason C. Esterbrook, 72 Years of Age, Passed Away Last Sunday After a Long Illness.

Mason C. Esterbrook, 72 years of age, veteran printer and newspaperman, died at his home in South Weymouth, last Sunday. Mr. Esterbrook was born in Spring Prairie, Wis., the son of Thomas Esterbrook.

Early in life he was seized with a desire for the sea, and at the age of 11 shipped with his uncle, visiting China and the East Indies.

In 1857 he went to Abington and started in the office of the Abington Standard to learn the printing business, published by Charles C. Esterbrook a relative. In the latter part of 1857 he went to Boston, where he worked in job printing plants. Again the call of the sea proved too strong for him to resist, and he made three voyages to the Cape of Good Hope and other foreign ports. After his retirement from seafaring life he enlisted in Company E, 47th Mass. regiment, and served in the gulf campaign under Gen. Banks. After his term in the army, he served in the navy. Mr. Esterbrook, after his return from the war, entered the printing business again, serving on the Boston Post, Waterbury American and New Haven Journal, as foreman, and later he served in the same capacity for the Middleboro Gazette, Brockton Advance, Abington Journal, Plymouth County Journal and the Whitman Times, being connected with the latter office 30 years. Mr. Esterbrook has carried on the job printing here for 10 years.

He was a post commander of David A. Russell Post, G. A. R., of Whitman; a member of Paritan Lodge, A. F. and A. M. of Whitman, and Pilgrim Chapter O. E. S. of Whitman. He is survived by a widow.

Optimistic Thought.

Remember, not too much of anything.

Weymouth With The Majority.

Seven Hours of Steady Voting and Some of the Expected Happened.

As November days go Tuesday was far above the average for people to get abroad and twenty-four hundred of Weymouth citizens availed themselves of the opportunity to declare their citizenship by going to the polls and casting a ballot for state and county officers and also on several amendments to existing Constitutional Laws and Legislative enactments. Twenty-four hundred people passed the turnstile and the following is the result.

WEYMOUTH SCHOOLS SAFE.

Little Chance for Holocaust as Occurred in Peabody in Weymouth. All Local Buildings Conform to State Laws.

As a result of the terrible fire in the Peabody school last week, most all the towns in this section are carefully inspecting their school buildings to ascertain just what the risk is, at the present, of a repetition of the Peabody holocaust.

In Weymouth, Mr. Pearson, superintendent of schools states that all the buildings conform in every detail to the required fire laws. All the buildings have the required two or more exits, properly placed and but one building, the Hunt in Weymouth, is occupied by pupils on the third floor.

Of the larger buildings, the Athens school at North Weymouth, which has the largest number of pupils in town, has four separate exits, which the high school with 380 odd pupils, has three main exits and at the Washington school in East Weymouth, there are two exits and 218 pupils. By actual time tests all the pupils have marched out of their respective buildings in one minute, after the fire gong was sounded. Mr. Pearson has insisted ever since he took charge in town, that fire drills be held at least every two weeks in the lower grades, where the danger is greatest, and the parents of our school children can rest assured that if fire should break out in any of our buildings, with the fire drills, efficient teaching corps and our modern fire department, no such disaster as visited Peabody, would repeat in this town.

The Old Colony Association of Universalist churches, held the regular quarterly meeting last Friday, in the First Universalist church of Weymouth. Rev. L. J. Richards of Stoughton, presided. Rev. Arthur Mercer, pastor of the home church extended a welcome at the morning session and Rev. F. M. Billington conducted the devotional exercises. Rev. John Brett told of the work accomplished at the Workingmen's Home in Boston. Rev. F. M. Billington and Rev. L. J. Richards delivered addresses on "Efficiency."

At noon, dinner was provided by the ladies of the church and after, there was a business meeting at which the following officers were elected: Rev. L. J. Richards, president; C. B. Essler, vice president; Rev. F. M. Billings, secretary; Eben Prescott, treasurer; C. F. Andrews, Warren Weston and F. A. Linn, executive committee.

At the afternoon session Rev. George Leighton, State Superintendent of Universalist churches discussed, "The Forward Work of the Universalist Churches." "Citizens or Criminals, Which?" was the subject of Prof. F. E. Laskey's address and Rev. Mr. Brett told how the churches could help the Workingmen's Home in Boston. The organ was presided over by Miss Emma Clapp who also led the singing.

A Real Cooking Wonder!

Crawford Ranges

have more improvements than all others combined. The "Single Damper" (patented) does with one motion what, in other ranges, requires moving two dampers, and does it better.

The deep Ash Hod in the base—with Coal Hod beside it —(patented) is better than the old clumsy Ash Pan. Easy to remove and carry — doesn't spill the ashes.

Crawford Ovens bake best;—no "scorching spots" or "cold corners"

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

To neither chickens nor hens ever give any sort of meal without scalding it. If salt, pepper or other spices are added, mix them before wetting.

Now and then certain individuals in a flock will get overfat in spite of the careful methods of feeding. Fat hens are usually sluggish, poor layers, and worth more in the pot than in the laying pen.

Apple trees may be transplanted in autumn with perfect success, if they are treated properly. If a hundred trees are planted, that number ought to be expected to live.

Weeds in the lawn are an indication that the soil is poor. They differ from cultivated plants in that they require poor land. If the lawn is good and rich the grass will grow vigorously and crowd out the weeds.

Many farmers make a mistake by trying to be too economical. Of course, we must count the cents, but money is certainly well invested when it goes to buy a good machine to save time and labor, and which will be a comfort forever.

If the whole harness can not go, be at least sure to secure the collar with any new horse purchase, so that the animal can work without being tortured. The collar once used for one horse ought never to be used for another.

Around your newly transplanted trees raise a mound of the surface soil 12 or 18 inches high. This will prevent the rain from standing about their roots, and steady them through the winter, so that the winds will not rack them out of place.

Asparagus roots may be planted in spring or fall, provided the ground is moderately dry; otherwise it is better to plant in the spring. The land must be well prepared and can hardly be too rich. Good strong 1-year-old plants are by many preferred to older ones.

It is not good farming to spread over two acres the work and manure necessary for one, even if you double your production of grain. Good farming would put the work and manure of two acres on one, and thus cause the one acre to produce the crop of the two.

Just what is meant by a profitable agriculture? Simply this: There shall be a reasonable return on the capital invested in farming and a reasonable return for the farmer's labor and managerial ability. A farmer, like any other man in any other business, is entitled to what he earns, and what he earns should be sufficient to give him and his family some of the more essential conveniences of modern life, time for study, some recreation and opportunity for education for his children.

The size of a farming business may be best measured not by the amount of capital invested—bad management may result in this capital being only partially utilized—nor by the area in crops—each crop requires a different outlay per acre and brings in a different return—but by the number of day's labor needed in the operation of the farm. To obtain a full year's pay the farmer must do a full year's work of the kind that creates something of value. In other words, the farmer must be profitably employed. It is not enough to keep busy, he must keep busy creating.

Farming has always been hazardous business. Fire, frost and flood; wind and hail and drought; blight and the hordes of insect enemies, have destroyed the crops since man began tilling the soil.

Yet with all its hazards, farming is perhaps the most stable and substantial of all business. They say that 90 per cent of the merchants fail. We have always suspected those statistics, but certainly a much smaller proportion of farmers are sold out under the hammer.

Now is the time to get ready for winter; the year's operations should be rounded out, the fields, the buildings, the live stock and the crops should be prepared for the long siege of cold and inclement weather comes to the entire country in some degree or other. The time to do all this preparing is before the siege has been begun; the man who makes no preparation to combat the rigors of winter is no wiser than the nation which makes no preparations for self-defense in case of war.

Vegetables must be stored under the conditions that will keep them in the best condition for use. In the first place, they should be handled carefully. Bruises form a place for decay germs to enter. The vegetables store best if a little immature. Cabbage, celery and root crops keep best at low temperature, with a fairly moist atmosphere and good ventilation. Onions keep best just above freezing in a dry atmosphere. Squash and pumpkin need a dry atmosphere at about 50 degrees. Celery, when dug, is really transplants, as it has to be kept growing when in storage. Dig it with a good deal of soil on the roots and plant closely in sand or loose damp soil in a cool cellar or pit. The root crops keep best when buried in sand or soil in a cool place. The vegetables, excepting celery, will keep better if well dried in the sun before being stored.

PESTS OF THE TROPICS.

Insects Whose Bite Is Like the Touch of Redhot Iron.

The pestiferous insects that infest the region tributary to the headwaters of the Amazon make life miserable for any one who may venture into the region. Commander H. A. Edwards of the Bolivia-Brazil boundary commission declares that there is no escaping them and that you are always scratching or slapping your body, except when you are under your mosquito net—and even then if you are not asleep.

In camp ants are a continual nuisance. They eat your clothes, gnaw the softer parts of your boots and ravage the food. Many kinds bite savagely. One kind, which the natives call itashi, lives in palisados or holy posts—trees that they hollow out themselves. Their bite is like the touch of a redhot iron, and if any one inadvertently leans against a palisado the little red demons swarm out upon him instantly, and so bite him that for an hour afterward his life is almost unbearable.

Most dreaded of all are the tucanderas—black ants with bodies one and a half inches long that live in the forks of trees, but that often invade your tent. They bite very hard and probably inject some sort of poison into their victims, for the part bitten swells and pains excruciatingly. The sauba or leaf carrying ants, black ants that make broad, straight roads of their own and move about in armies with scouts and flanking parties; gray ants that live in mounds of red earth six feet high, yellow ants that dwell in rotten wood—all make the traveler unwelcome, either by damaging his belongings or by inflicting pain on his person.

Mosquitoes, the bite of which is not only painful and irritating, but imparts malaria and yellow fever; various phlebotomous flies that inject the germs of what is called three day fever; wasps of all kinds; bees of all sizes; hornets as large as the smaller humming birds; the matoucha and the tabana, a sort of mangrove fly with a taste for bloodsucking—each and every one of them does its share toward making the life of the explorer in those regions almost unbearable. There are flies that lay their eggs in your flesh or in your clothes.

Where there is any sort of grass you cannot guard against the attack of the miquin, a microscopic tick whose sojourn on your body causes a most tantalizing itch that you can alleviate only by sponging your body night and morning with alcohol. And in many places the plum, a small black fly that looks like a speck of dust, drives you half crazy by its bite. Although those regions are a paradise for the entomologist, the ordinary traveler will hardly regard them in that light.—Youth's Companion.

Obvious.

Something New in Neckwear

In neckwear the introduction of black velvet or black satin, with sheer white fabrics, has brought about some very beautiful novelties. Many of these are in the effect of the choker collars, like those so fashionable on coats and cloth gowns. Others open at the front in a narrow V, like those shown in the picture.

The high-necked models give opportunity for a becoming management of lines to adapt the collars to either the long or short neck. In one model, called the "Brinkley," in honor of the famous Nell, there is a high collar of black satin laid in irregular folds and wired to stay in place. It is lengthened into points at the front, and these points extend below the line of the neck. This satin band opens at the front in a V, in which the points do not quite meet at the bottom. It overlaps a crushed band of very sheer organdie which extends across the front space. A full jabot of the organdie, with woven-in border and hemstitched edges, is set on to this band. It falls in an especially charming cascade from the base of the high collar.

Another high collar, with jabot attached, employs black velvet ribbon with organdie. A wide band of organdie has pointed tabs with hemstitched edges set on at the front and back, at its upper edge. The lower edge is finished with a narrow hemstitched hem. The band, above the hem, is laid in fine plaits.

A band of velvet ribbon is sewed along the top of the collar under the tabs. A plaited jabot falls from under its lower edge at the front. It is edged with an effective pattern in fillet lace, and is graduated in width to fall in a point extending nearly to the waist line.

The collars pictured here are of organdie finished in one case with hemstitching and in the other with both hemstitching and lace. They are so clearly set forth by the photograph that descriptions are not needed.

OUR COAST LIGHTS

These Beacons Are Invaluable as Aids to Navigation.

THE SERVICE NEVER SLEEPS.

Night and Day at All Seasons of the Year the Flash of the Lamp or the Song of the Fog Siren Welcomes or Warns the Watchful Mariner.

The work of safeguarding navigation on the coasts of the United States is a far greater and more complex problem than most people appreciate, for there is a multitude of complex conditions to be met, each one varying with the peculiarities of its location. The territory to be covered is also unusually great, as it includes not only the entire ocean fronts of the country, both on the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, but of Alaska, the Hawaiian Islands, portions of the West Indies and the great lakes as well, and the service never ends either by night or day, summer or winter.

The lighthouse service comprises a force of 5,000 men, on whom devolves the duty of maintaining over 14,000 aids to navigation of various kinds, including lighthouses, lightships, light buoys and buoys of various descriptions, together with many fog signals, and an important incidental duty is that of protecting the shores in the neighborhood of stations from damage by erosion that might endanger the structures.

The desirable distribution of lights and other aids along a coast depends on its maritime development and its physical characteristics and is influenced by the prevailing meteorological conditions. Thus the north Atlantic coast has a large foreign and coasting trade, and the shores are intricate and in part rugged, and along this coast the main lights are, with few exceptions, placed at such intervals that their arcs of visibility overlap. On portions of the coast of simple contour, and with smaller traffic, there are unlighted stretches between the lights which stand on the projecting capes. The design and construction of lighthouses vary with their location and the surrounding conditions, no two being exactly alike.

Next to the lighthouse, the lightship is one of the most picturesque objects seen along our coasts. This vessel is ninety-two feet on the water line, twenty-five feet beam and has a draft of eleven feet four inches. It is built of steel and incombustible materials throughout and has five water tight bulkheads. It is self propelled, being provided with an internal combustion oil burning engine of 200 horsepower, and has an oil vapor or gas light fifty feet above the water, located on a tubular mast, through which access to the light can be safely had in any weather. The fog signal is a siren using compressed air, and a submarine bell is also fitted. Fifty-two light vessels are maintained, and that there may be no interruption of the service there are fourteen relief ships, so that if anything happens to a ship or station another can be quickly sent to take its place. All of these vessels are very strongly built to enable them to withstand the severe service they are required to perform and have flush decks for increased safety.

Only one light, that at Navesink, N. J., is equipped with electric light for which current is generated at the station, but there are thirty minor stations where electric lights, either incandescent or arc, are used which obtain current from outside sources. In most of the coast lights oil vapor lamps are used having mantles of either thirty-five or fifty-five millimeters diameter and arranged either singly or in groups giving light intensities of from 600 to 2,500 candles. These lamps are not only very powerful and reliable, but are much more economical than the old oil wick lamps, as they require but from 0.6 to 0.88 gallon per candle power per year as against 4.8 to 7.6 gallons for the old oil lights. The increased illuminating efficiency is about eight times.

Beacons, both fixed and floating, are numerous and depend on either gas or electricity for their lights, and these are especially valuable in inaccessible places where attendance is difficult. These, however, are only put in stations of subordinate importance. The majority of such beacons use gas and are provided with tanks of sufficient capacity for storing a supply of acetylene gas for about five months.

Fog signals are of particular value in many places, and these are distributed along the coast, according to conditions prevailing. Thus on the coast of Maine there is an average of 1,057 hours of fog during the year, while on the south Atlantic and gulf coasts the average is only 180 hours. There are 328 fog signals from Cape Lookout northward out of a total of 567 maintained by the service. There are 127 fog signals on the American shores of the great lakes and eighty-three on the northern Pacific and Alaska shores, while in Porto Rico and Hawaii, where fog is rare, no signals of this kind are required.

The principal fog signals used are air sirens, steam whistles, reed horns, bells controlled by clockwork and submarine bells operated by compressed air, all of which are valued by sailors.—Engineering News.

Weymouth Gazette

FRIDAY, NOV. 5, 1915

The election is over, and if the radiant faces one sees on account of the result is a harbinger of the coming Thanksgiving Proclamations of President Wilson and Governor Walsh those Proclamations will have a cheerful ring.

The Sunday Night Forum in South Weymouth and in Weymouth Landing are proving more popular than ever before. This idea of a peoples forum is attracting extra large audiences whenever held. Good speakers on topics of the day have been secured, and the people of this town should take advantage of these meetings and make the weekly sessions a feature of the week's events.

The Highway Commission has drafted a code of regulations in regard to headlights on motor carriages which will become "operative" when approved by the Governor and sufficiently advertised. That word "operative" is a delusion when applied to present regulations as to "safety first" in the operation of motor vehicles on public highways. The morning paper now on our table reports 16 people in nearby towns and cities killed or injured by motor accidents within the last 24 hours.

All the public improvement societies in town have expressed their disapproval of the fare increase on the Bay State Street Railway. Committees from the different societies were appointed and these committees have gathered together to discuss the protest and resolutions to be presented by the town as a whole. This is a grand good idea, but why not carry out the same idea in regard to our town. Boom Weymouth! A Boston real estate man of prominence, says Weymouth as a town and Weymouth real estate is dropping off fearfully. Why is this? Is it high tax valuation, lack of unity among the different sections, or what? We don't know, but we do know that with Weymouth resources and a proper spirit of getting together, our public improvement societies can boom this town and make Weymouth one of the top notchers in this state. Think it over!

A number of Brockton business men are attempting to establish a "Morris plan" bank in the Shoe City. The Morris banks which are now in operation in many American cities, are financial institutions which give the workingman the advantages offered the merchant and manufacturer by the regular commercial banking houses. They were devised in the first place to compete with the loan sharks. Wherever these banks have been established they are doing much good. The working man who needs a small loan to tide him over a period of financial difficulty caused by illness or some other misfortune can secure a loan at the same reasonable rate of interest charged the business men by the commercial bank. The indorsement of reputable citizens, such as any honest workman can secure, is the only security asked. Why not a bank of this kind in town? Weymouth and surrounding towns in this section, should be a good field for a Morris bank. Our many wage workers need such an institution, why not one in Weymouth, which would cover all the towns along the south shore?

The New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad as well as other railroads in our country are conducting campaigns to teach people how foolishly it is to walk on the railroad tracks. Why doesn't some town start a campaign to teach people to walk in the sidewalks and not in the middle of the road? In this town many people walk in the road instead of on the sidewalk. They say the sidewalk isn't as good walking as the road. May be not, but the sidewalk is the place that was set aside for pedestrians. Why not use it? With the increase, all the time of automobiles, the life of the person who walks in the street becomes more hazardous and the driver of the automobile has more troubles to look out for. Last Sunday we saw a man walking in the middle of the road, with an auto coming behind him and one in front of him. Instead of getting over on the side of the road and giving the two autos the road space, he kept right on walking in the very middle of the road, in spite of the frantic tooting of horns by the autoists. Result, one auto got by all right, the other in avoiding the man, just cleared a curbstone by the narrowest of margins, giving the people in the car a decided shock. While the highway commission is chasing the speedsters etc. etc., it might be well to do something to the pedestrian who persists in taking his daily strolls, in the middle of the road.

By painful experience the public is awakening to the fact that not half enough attention has been devoted to the proper construction of the children's schools. Much more has been done to make industrial buildings and factories safe from terrible fires, but in school buildings a sort of inertia has prevailed. Schoolhouse after schoolhouse have been erected in this country, many like those that burned in Cleveland, Ohio, Peabody and other places. What is to be done? Out of the terrible loss in Peabody the only gain that can be gotten is to take the holocaust as a dreadful warning that will awaken communities, privately and officially, collec-

At the Monday meeting of the Selectmen James E. Burk was granted a victuallers license at Independence square.

The Pond Plain Improvement society was granted permit to give entertainments in the School Hall.

Samuel B. Hutchins granted permit to hold dancing parties in Fogg's Opera house until Jan. 1st 1916.

Lewis Bates granted permit to dig claims along the shore front for sale.

The Bay State Street Railway Co. accept the alteration of location and relocation of tracks on Pleasant street at the place of widening near the Porter church at Lovell's Corner.

The New England Insurance League call for information as to what is now taking the place of the recently damaged machine at North Weymouth and is informed "A horse drawn Hose Carriage".

The State Highway Commission report that work on the Washington street line under contract to the Columbian Contract Co. is nearly completed from the Hingham line to Lake View Park or Whitman's pond at an expense of $4690 and call for first payment of $2,657.67. When completed to the point mentioned above the contractors will take up the work at Main street or westerly end of the line and go toward the center.

THE INSTITUTIONS OF THE COMMONWEALTH.

Hon. Guy A. Ham Entertains Members of C. M. A. Men's Club on Wednesday Evening.

One of the largest attended meetings ever held by the Clapp Memorial Men's club, took place at the Clapp Memorial building on Wednesday night. Shortly after 6 o'clock the members and their friends began to arrive and after an informal half hour, the company were invited to the banquet hall above, where Caterer Farrar had provided one of his celebrated roast beef suppers.

After all had satisfied the inner man, President Earle called the gathering to order and introduced the Hon. Guy A. Ham of Boston as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Ham, from the time he commenced his talk to the close, held the closest attention of his audience. The speaker had for his subject "The Institutions of the Commonwealth" and told of the workings and management of them and the expense of the state to maintain them. At the close of the talk Mr. Ham was given a rising vote of thanks.

Eddy—Silva.

A pretty home wedding took place last Saturday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Silva, 794 Broad street, East Weymouth, when their daughter, Miss Jane Pauline Silva, became the bride of Arthur Allen Eddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Eddy of Ware. Miss Abbie Florence Turner was the maid of honor and Francis Merchant Silva, a brother of the bride was best man.

The ceremony was performed at two o'clock by Rev. William M. Newton of the Methodist Episcopal church in the presence of relatives and close friends.

Following a reception a wedding luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Eddy left for a wedding trip to New York and Washington, D. C. They will reside in Philadelphia, Pa.

tively and singularly and stir in them, the demand for measures that will make the occurrence of such disasters as nearly impossible as care and ingenuity of man can make them. By conscientious construction and a rigid inspection, defective boilers and buildings can and must be eliminated; only supreme carelessness and poor judgement can account for the absence of adequate fire escapes and other means of preventing a fire and of stopping them after they do get started. Let the lesson of the Peabody fire be heeded and the other schools of this state be inspected, not with the narrow minded view of preventing a fire, but with proper regard for a preparedness for the hour when the flames do break out. When this is done such heart-rending horrors in our school cannot occur.

—Miss Mabelle L. Bartlett of Wakefield spent the week end at the home of her father, A. W. Bartlett of Lovell street.

—Dorothy Alden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alden, celebrated her fourth birthday last Saturday afternoon, October 30th, by entertaining ten of her little playmates. A very dainty luncheon of ices and cakes was served and with games the children spent a very happy afternoon. Miss Dorothy received a number of pretty gifts.

—Major Francis Bicknell, a member of the Loyal Legion, attended the regular meeting and banquet of that organization which was held at the American House, Boston, on Wednesday night.

—Mr. Elbert Prouty of Beals street, died at St. Elizabeth's hospital on Monday, November 1st, after a few days' illness, aged 39 years. Mr. Prouty was taken to the hospital last Friday with typhoid fever which developed into pneumonia from which he died early Monday morning. Funeral services were held from his late home on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Charles Clark of the Pilgrim church, officiating. Interment was in the North Weymouth cemetery. Besides his wife Mr. Prouty leaves six children.

—At the next meeting of the Universalist Men's club there will be a debate on the question: "Resolved that North Weymouth is not a good place for a man to build a home in."

OLD COLONY CLUB MUSICAL.

Attractive Program Given at Club Gathering Last Thursday Afternoon. Miss Ethel Freeman Raymond in Charge.

The regular meeting of the Old Colony Ladies' club took place last Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the Second Universalist church in South Weymouth, when a musical was given under the able direction of Miss Ethel Freeman Raymond. Mrs. Marcella W. Lewis sang a group of songs, Mrs. A. H. Hunting played cello numbers, Oscar L. Hunting contributed bass solos and Miss Raymond played organ selections and accompanied the other artists on the piano.

Preceding the musical program, Mrs. William A. Wagner, the club president, presided and reports of the State Federation meeting at Marion were read by Mrs. Frederick G. Bauer and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster. The meeting was one of the most enjoyable of the season.

Sale and Entertainment.

The Golden Rule Circle of King's Daughters, connected with the Congregational church of East Weymouth held a sale and general entertainment in the chapel last Friday night, for the benefit of its charity fund. The sale tables were presided over by the following ladies: domestic, Mrs. Alice Blanchard, Mrs. Lizzie Denbroeder, Mrs. Clara Shaw, Miss Orilla Wade; cake, Mrs. Nellie Denbroeder, Mrs. Lottie Tirrell, Mrs. Nettie Bicknell; candy, Mrs. Ida Sylvester, Mrs. Millie Tilden, Miss Florence Earle, Mrs. Fannie Orr, Mrs. Florence Cortell; fancy, Mrs. Alice McCobb, Mrs. Clara Mitchell, Mrs. Annie Newcomb.

"The Bargain Counter" a three-act comedy, was given by the following ladies, Mrs. Fannie Orr, Mrs. Florence Cortell, Mrs. Bessie Hunt, Mrs. Bernice Haskins and Mrs. Susie Sampson. Mrs. Franklin P. Whitten sang several solos and the organ was presided over by Miss Ethel Raymond.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH

—On Wednesday Nov. 10, $2.50 in gold given to lucky ticket holder at Bates Opera House.—Adv.

—One of the features of the Halloween season in South Weymouth was the party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Sanford on Pleasant street, last Saturday night. The rooms were beautifully decorated with streamers and crepe paper, and the guests were garbed in Halloween costume. A dinner was served, a feature being the place cards, which were in the shape of paper witches, and the favors, the latter being witches' tall hats filled with candy. Following the dinner, dancing, games and music were enjoyed.

—Mrs. Everett Hollis entertained the Bassobee Club at her home on Monday evening last.

—At the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Lutton on Pond street, a Halloween Party was held last Saturday evening. Games, refreshments, dancing and music made up the program. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion.

—Mrs. McKenney, an elderly lady who lives with her daughter, Mrs. John F. Welsh on Reed avenue, met with a fatal accident on Wednesday night at her home, when she fell down stairs, her neck being broken by the fall.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Andrews of Hollis street are the happy parents of a baby girl.

—M. R. Lord & Co. have purchased a new Ford truck.

—Mrs. Sidney Rogers Cook recently underwent a successful operation for appendicitis in St. Louis, Mo.

—The Village Study club held a meeting at the Fogg Library on Monday evening.

—Mrs. Manetta Joy has been visiting at the home of the Rev. Ernest Caswell at Laconia, N. H.

—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clark of Attleboro have been recent guests of Arthur Tirrell.

—A party of the Women's Loyal Circle made a trip to Brockton Lodge of Moose, Tuesday evening.

—The newly appointed minister, Rev. Fred A. Line, occupies the pulpit for the first time on Sunday. His subject will be "Our Confession of Faith." Sunday evening there will be an illustrated lecture on "Our National Capitol and Mount Vernon." This is one of the Henry R. Rose lectures.

—Combination 5 answered a still alarm for a chimney fire at the home of Dr. Hopkins, who recently purchased the Lutton estate on Tower avenue. The damage was slight.

—Willard Tucker and family of Wrenham have recently moved into the house at 450 Union street.

—The general committee in charge of the Old South Church Fair, to be held on November 9 and 10, has been selected. Mrs. James B. Tirrell is chairman and her assistants are Mrs. Henry C. Alvord, Mrs. Wendell Joy, Mrs. Matthew Loud, Mrs. Arthur Tirrell, Mrs. Perry Sipprelle and Miss Junie Loud.

—Miss Hester Swan entertained a large party of her friends at a very pretty Halloween party on Saturday evening, in Pond Plain hall. Games were played, followed by dancing until 11 o'clock. The hall was prettily decorated. Guests were present from Boston, Everett and the Weymouths.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edward McGrory of Roslindale are the happy parents of a girl born on Sunday. Mr. McGrory is a native of Weymouth.

—Fred Allison and family of Bates avenue have left for Syracuse, N. Y., where Mr. Allison has accepted a position as foreman in one of the shoe factories.

—Mrs. Russell Tinkham of Medford is visiting Mrs. Charles Tinkham.

—The Tuesday Evening Whist Club met at the home of Mrs. Frank Thomas this week.

—Mrs. Sumner Bowker has returned from the Boothby hospital, Boston, where she recently underwent an operation.

Follansbee-Wilde.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dupont Wilde, Woods Hole, Sunday, October 31, when their daughter Grace was married to Minot French Follansbee of Whitman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Clarke of Gloucester, the double ring service being used.

The wedding march was played by Raymond A. Thayer of Whitman, a cousin of the bride.

To the sweet strains from the "Bridal chorus from Lohengrin," the bridal party proceeded to the beautifully decorated parlor, where the couple were married under a rose-bower.

Edna Thayer, a cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mercedes Wilde, a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Mrs. P. B. Wilde was matron of honor.

Phillips Brooks Wilde, a brother of the bride, acted as best man and gave the bride away.

C. Irving Bates of Weymouth, a cousin of the bride, officiated as groom's man.

The bride looked most charming in a gown of white brocade, crepe de chine, the dress material being brought from China by the late Rear-Admiral Wilde, an uncle of the bride.

The bridal veil was fastened with lily of the valley, and the bride carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid and matron of honor wore pink chameuse draped with white lace and carried baskets of white chrysanthemums and lilies.

Decorations were by C. Irving Bates of Weymouth, decorator.

The wedding cake was cut by the bride with a sword which belonged to the late Rear-Admiral Wilde.

Mrs. Louis F. Bates of Weymouth, an aunt of the bride, and Mrs. A. D. Wilde, poured.

Guests were present from Boston, Weymouth, Braintree, Whitman and Pittsfield, N. H.

The couple left amid showers of rice and confetti in an automobile for Brockton, where they took a late train for parts unknown.

The bride was well known in Weymouth, being bookkeeper for her uncle, Louis F. Bates, for a year.

The Autumn Trail.

When, in the gray of the early morning, a distant honking of wild geese signals the closing down of winter, I pull on my tramping boots and call Paddy to join me on the trail. There is a zest in the very breath of these late Fall mornings, the tingle of sharp frost in the air, and the crunching yield of half-frozen earth under foot, as we swing along the highway.

The rising sun gleams fiery orange on the window-panes. The frost shimmers on the orchard grass. From down the road man's voice calls to his horses. He is beginning his day's toil; we exult in the thought of our day of freedom! We feel the cloak of civilization, the armor that man with men must wear slipping away, and opening up unknown depths to the sunshine and the clear, fragrant air. In the exposure we find truths of ourselves that we had not known. That is the healing of the great outdoors, the recreation of the road—Raymond Comstock in The Country Magazine for November.

STETSON SHOE COMPANY FOREMEN MEET.

Interesting Addresses Given by Mr. D. G. Montt at Semi-Monthly Meeting Last Tuesday Night.

At the semi-monthly meeting of the Foremen of the Stetson Shoe Company, held in South Weymouth, last Tuesday evening, Mr. D. G. Montt, South American statistician of the Babson Statistical Organization of Wellesley Hills, Mass., delivered a splendid address on "The Business Opportunities of South America."

Mr. Montt is a native Chilean of the very best connections and exceedingly well versed in everything pertaining to South American opportunities. A close relative of ex-President Montt of Chile, was formerly employed by the Chilean Government as its special commissioner and later as a delegate to the Fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, held in Boston in 1912. Mr. Montt is a Spanish writer of repute. His writings are much appreciated in South America, where he has done a good deal to place the national drama on a higher level. Mr. Montt is also a lecturer on South American subjects, his lecture "The Mind of the Latin-American Nations," delivered at the Latin-American Conference of Clark University in 1913, reaching the widest publicity. Mr. Montt is now specially engaged by the Babson Statistical Organization to direct in the proper way the trade that this country is bound to get in South America.

Mr. Montt said in part: "The business opportunities of South America can be divided into five types: (one depending closely on the other): 1st.—Opportunity for the promoter. 2nd.—Opportunity for the investor. 3rd.—Opportunity for the manufacturer, the merchant and the businessman. 4th.—Opportunity for the average man: the workingman, the office man, etc. 5th. Opportunity for the settler, the man inclined to invest his small capital in the agricultural lands offered (sometimes free of charge) by the various governments, the man that is willing to rough it and be a pioneer, a colonist or a settler."

"The main reason for Europe's past success in South America," Mr. Montt said, "has been her investments in South America. The total investments of Great Britain alone in South America are estimated to be in excess of $5,000,000,000." "Will England, Germany and France," he asked, "be able to continue investing money in South America after the war is over? I believe that they will not. I believe further," he added, "that we have here practically all of their money and I feel confident that it is now the turn of the United States to help the South American nations to develop their wonderful possibilities and resources and, therefore, to invest in South American securities. People will say: 'We will invest our money.' I do not believe it. South America has got to have the money to keep her own industries going and to develop her resources and she will pay as high an interest as is necessary to have capital diverted to her own channels. I believe further that the American people have more common sense than to invest their money in countries which have shown themselves, in such a short time, to be more unsafe and more unstable than the most unstable South American countries put together. So it is my firm conviction that we will invest in South America and that we will get her trade."

The speaker further stated that American investments will be the origin of the other opportunities he mentioned, except, perhaps, those opportunities for settlers or people who want to colonize the lands offered to them by the various South American governments.

The lecturer took the audience through an illustrated tour of South America and in explaining the pictures, gave a brief description of the countries under discussion and pointed out in very concise but forceful way the opportunities offered to our citizens.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE MEETING.

Evening School To Be Established In Town.

The School Committee met last Tuesday evening and discussed plans for establishing an evening school in town as required by law. Plans now in preparation will have the school open about January 1st. A class for illiterate minors will be formed, also a class in citizenship for those over 21 who wish to become citizens, and an evening high school class will be established in dressmaking and housekeeping.

THE RIVER THAMES

London's Great Artery, With Its Crimes and Mysteries.

TRAPS FOR UNWARY VICTIMS.

Waterside Houses With Floors Opening at the Push of a Lever to Drop Its Fleece Occupant Into a Watery Grave—Ghost Boats of the River.

London's great artery, the river Thames, hides many a grim story under its murky waters, some of them centuries old, some of them merely incidents of yesterday. Just as no other river has quite the same wonder as belongs to the Thames, so no other river is so wrapped in mystery, so surrounded with stories of tragedy and crime.

Many of the old waterside houses, which rise sheer with the bank, contain rooms in which the floor is built directly over the water—floors upon which one could stand in apparently perfect safety while some one in an adjacent room worked a lever which caused the floor to open and his victim to drop into the river.

A gambling club is said to have met in such a room once a year to play for tremendous stakes. The party played on until one of their members was ruined. Then the rest of the men went away in silence, while the ruined man went down into the dark waters.

One of the old waterside houses at Wapping, too, is among the bits of the Thames with a reputation for being haunted. A flight of steps leads from the house to the river, but these steps are disused, and the door at the top of them is walled up. Despite this, often people passing by on the river at night time swear to having seen two men come through the walled door and down the steps. Then, after lowering some bundle into the waters, they return to the house. The identity of the men and the contents of their bundle remain among the insoluble stories of the Thames.

The Thames police force of about 300 men is employed to guard against all sorts of additions to the mysteries of the Thames, and their task is of far greater magnitude than might be casually imagined. Most imperative is it that each member of this force shall be an expert swimmer and understand the right methods for dealing with persons rescued from the water.

A very large number of persons are saved from intentional and accidental drowning in the river every year, an average number somewhere between seventy and a hundred. But the number of persons who are "found drowned" strikes a still greater average—it is never less and often more than 100 in a year—besides which it is well known that the waters of the river close above many persons of whom nothing more is ever seen or heard.

If it stones could speak the bridges across the Thames could tell many a pitiful and grim life story, especially Waterloo bridge, which has such sad associations as to have gained it the sobriquet of "The Bridge of Sighs."

Incidentally, Waterloo bridge is another part of the Thames which is said to be haunted. It is not so very long since a more than usually clear sighted man went to the police with the information that he had seen a woman jump from the parapet of Waterloo bridge. He had been crossing the bridge late one night, when he had noticed a woman in black walking in front of him. Suddenly he saw her make an appealing gesture, but before he could reach the woman she had disappeared.

That was all. There was no splash following her disappearance, and no result came from the search which was made. Those who are familiar with the history of the river said that the man had seen the ghost of Waterloo bridge—the tragic woman in black, of whom nothing is known save that she haunts the London "Bridge of Sighs."

Another mysterious thing about the Thames, which no amount of police supervision will destroy, is the "ghost" boats which have been and are frequently seen in various parts of the river. It is a fact that river police patrols have actually given chase to such ghost ships, to find there is nothing substantial to be found on reaching the place where the ships had seemed to be.

One of the most curious stories of this kind is that of the mysterious boat which was seen making its way along the water toward London bridge one day, about a quarter of a century ago. As she neared the bridge there was a tremendous explosion, a vivid burst of light, and then—nothing! Not so much as a splinter of wood remained of the boat which had been, and the story of it lingers from that day to this as one of the hundreds of tragic unknown things which form the secrets of the river of mystery.—London Answers.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Every art, however trifling in itself, which tends to enliven and embellish domestic life, must be advantageous, not only to the female sex, but to society in general.—Maria Edgeworth.

DO NOT SLIGHT LEFTOVERS.

Take any bits of leftover meat, put through a meat chopper, season and mix with egg, and form into cutlets, place half an almond cut lengthwise at the small end to represent the cutlet bone. Dip in egg and fry. Place a cauliflower in the center of the dish and pile the cutlets around and serve. Serve with a meat sauce.

A small piece of cheese, if grated, will add flavor to any number of dishes. It is good in escalloped potato, in escalloped cabbage, adds to the flavor of milk toast and may be sprinkled over lettuce which has been dressed with French dressing. A little grated cheese added to an omelet is an improvement.

A dainty cracker to serve with a salad course is prepared by heaping grated cheese on the crackers, sprinkle with salt and cayenne and then toasting in the oven.

Sour cream makes a delicious filling for cakes; add brown sugar and cook until it is hard, add nuts and beat until smooth.

Sour cream dressing, using cream, salt and a dash of cayenne served on young green onions is a dish not half well enough known.

Sour cream may be used to enrich any boiled salad dressing or used as above on other vegetables like cucumbers or tomatoes.

A tablespoonful of leftover peas with a few cold potatoes will make a most appetizing salad to serve for Sunday night supper.

Stale bits of bread may be used as crumbs for various dishes, as crotons, as bread puddings with fruit or custard, as filling with nuts for peppers, or baked potatoes; in fact in thousands of ways bits of bread may be utilized. Not a crumb should be wasted, even the crumb tray should be emptied for the little shreds.

Pieces of cake may be soaked in fruit juice, put in layers in a baking dish, and baked. Served hot with cream.

Orange peel and lemon peel may be used to flavor sauces, removing the peeling before serving.

SOUTH ISLAND

ON MILFORD SOUND

THOUGH not generally known as a field for tourists and not often visited by American travelers, the South Island of New Zealand is so rich in scenic attractions that it merits more attention from those who seek the beautiful or imposing places of the earth. Moreover, it is not at all difficult of access. There is a direct railway running from Bluff to what is known as the "cold lakes" district, a distance of about two hundred miles. The visitor to that region usually begins his tour of the lakes at Kingston, where a government steamer meets all trains and conveys the traveler up Lake Wakatipu to the pretty town of Queenston, a distance of 25 miles, writes W. D. Hornaday in Grit. Another steamer plies between Queenston and the upper head of the lake.

Good driveways skirt the shores of this and other inland bodies of water and running out of Queenston is a road to the summit of Ben Lomon mountain, which has an altitude of 5,747 feet. Other pleasant drives may be made to picturesque towns and villages scattered through the rugged region. Lake Wakatipu is of great depth, soundings having been made to 1,242 feet in one place. There are several perpetually snow-capped mountains in New Zealand, and on the North Island, a smoldering volcano, which emits smoke at frequent intervals, affords diversity to the view. Some of the glacial mountains are so Situated upon the sea-tossed shore of the South Island is the town of Bluff, which has the distinction of being what might be called the jumping-off place of the southern hemisphere. Its citizens claim that it is the most southern municipality in the world.

There is an element of romance in the very atmosphere of the community. It was there that several Antarctic expeditions paid their adieu to civilization and entered upon voyages into unknown seas. In the earlier days Bluff was the headquarters for many whaling expeditions. This industry gradually decreased, until it is now conducted only on a small scale. Living there today are a number of the sea-hardened men who belonged to whaling outfits. Some of them still have enough strength left to bring in their daily catch of fish, and others of their comrades spend their time idling about the wharf, watching the steamships and sailing crafts go to and fro, and regaling any listener that they may find with stirring tales of their ocean-going experiences. It is from Bluff also that most of the sea-elephants and penguin expeditions set forth. Some distance to the south of here lie the Macquarie group of islands, where most of these expeditions operate during a certain season of the year.

precipitous that they offer extraordinary opportunity for the exercise of prowess on the part of mountain climbers. It is considered quite a feat to reach the summit of the highest of these rugged peaks.

Many natural phenomena are to be seen in both the North and South Islands. Besides the wonderful and awe-inspiring outbursts of fire and water that greet the eye in the thermal district of the North Island there are some remarkable caves and other manifestations of an unseen power in the different parts of the Dominion.

Not long ago a new set of stalactite caves was discovered in the Nelson district. Of the two or three caves, one is supreme. It is tunnel-like in formation, a huge underground way, beautiful in its whiteness and the superlative decoration of deposited silt. A river that loses itself is also an attraction.

Hazy Ideas.
"I have been promised a job in the forest service," said the politician. "What are your duties to be?" "I don't know much about the proposition. I have been told that I may be sent out to inspect government preserves."

"For what purpose?"
"To see if they comply with the pure food laws, I suppose."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Danger Signals.
It takes a cheerful philosophy to find virtue in the sulphurous odor of a bad egg. But if all bad water and bad milk were blessed by a like beneficent danger signal what a host of dead and dying human beings would have been saved!—Exchange.

A Straight Tip.
"Colonel, please give me a little advice on racing matters. I understand you are an excellent judge of pace." "I am, son, and the one you are going will last about two years."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Extreme Case.
"My cousin is a true pessimist." "How's that?" "Even the brand of hope he uses is forlorn."—Kansas City Journal.

Both Are Good.
We are asked, "What is the best conundrum and answer you ever heard?"

That which was answered by a minister who was asked by a vain woman which hand he regarded as the most beautiful. And he replied, "Ask the poor, and they will tell you that most beautiful hand is the hand that gives."

Next to it is the reply of a banker who was asked, "Why is a promissory note like a rosebud?" He answered, "Because it matures on falling dew."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Not Settled Yet.
"Is the head of the house at home?" asked the agent as the mister of the family answered the doorbell. Making no effort to answer the question, the mister person said, "I don't know what line of goods you are introducing or whether they would fit in our establishment or not, that phase of the matter being neither here nor there, but let me tell you something—if you can establish once for all just who is to be recognized as the head of this house I'll buy a gross of whatever you've got and pay the catalogue price."—Pittsburgh Press.

An Aristocratic Grain.
Could plants lay claim to aristocratic position, as representing an old family, rice might safely claim to be of the most ancient pedigree. It is the earliest cereal known. Originally a native of India, it has crossed the ocean and made a home for itself where heat and moist soil could be found. It grows in all warm portions of the globe and furnishes the principal food of nearly one-third of the human race.

Couldn't See Why She Was Wrong.
"Was I rude this afternoon?" a little girl asked her mother. "I hope not, my dear," said the mother.

Little Girl—Well, our teacher was examining us in poetry—"Casablanca"—and she asked why did the boy stand on the burning deck, and I said because it was too hot for him to sit down, and she made me stand in the corner.—Stray Stories.

A Good Actor.
"Hamlet is out of a job. You remember that fellow who used to play the part of a butler so well?" "I remember him. He was remarkably good. I should think he could get a job as a real butler."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Precocious in Spots.
Bobby—Do I have to go to school, mother? Mother—Of course, Bobby. Bobby—Why, mother, I heard you tell father last night that I knew entirely too much.—Detroit Free Press.

OLD COLONY DRIVING CLUB.

Closing Matinee of the Season Last Saturday.

Mile heats, close finishes and extra heats, were the features of the last meet of the season of the Old Colony Gentlemen's Driving Club, held at the Fair grounds last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Fay, driving Dammon, in Class A, finished first in two heats, time 2:25 1/2 and 2:26. Extra heats were required to decide the winners in Classes E and F. The blue ribbon winners were Dammon, Patriot, Jack Binger, Blix, Pansy Blossom, Queen MacGregor, Dolan and Warren H.

Monday Club.

On Monday last the Monday Club met in the High School building. The conservation committee presented Mr. Winthrop Packard, who gave an interesting lecture on "Wild Birds," illustrating his address by the High School reflectoscope, which was presented to the school by the club.

Miss Flora McDonald sang two selections, accompanied by Miss Mae Allen at the piano.

At this meeting announcement was made by the Quincy Women's Club of a lecture (to-day) on "Our National Defenses."

Union Church Notes.
Morning worship at 10:30. Sermon by the pastor, whose subject will be: "The Training of Desire." Sunday school at 12 o'clock.

Communion service will be held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Young Volunteers will meet at 6 o'clock. Their subject will be: "How to Make Our Meetings More Interesting." The evening service will be omitted.

Thursday evening at 7:30, will be the mid-week meeting. Topic: "God's Presence." Last Monday evening the Flower Circle held a most enjoyable Halloween Party. There were witches and goblins; and all kinds of Halloween stunts made the evening pass very pleasantly.

Those of our teachers who attended the Convention of the Norfolk East District Sunday School Association, at East Weymouth on Tuesday, felt more than repaid. No one could come from that meeting without a larger vision of the possibilities of Sunday school work.

Last Sunday evening, Sec. Charles C. Merrill spoke in the interest of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, to a small, but appreciative audience. As a result of this meeting several of our men will attend the meetings in Boston, November 14-17, as delegates.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

High School Union Again a Feature of School Activities.

Again the "Union" has begun to hold its meetings in room 6 and before many weeks the school will resound with the voices of excited students in hot debates. The "Union" was formed during the early months of school last year under the leadership of accomplished students.

Several public debates were held with out of town teams which Weymouth easily defeated. This year the "Union" will attempt to carry out an extensive program which will not only help the debaters to acquire power in public speaking but will keep the residents of Weymouth interested in school affairs.

Next Monday the Junior class boys will be invited to join. The following officers were elected: Arthur Rousseau, president; Arthur White, secretary; membership committee, LeRoy Cope, chairman; Fred Lunt. The positions of vice president and treasurer were left open so that some ambitious Juniors may take some responsibility upon their shoulders.

The plans for the Junior Halloween party was brought to a climax last Thursday evening when nearly every Junior was present at the High School hall in order to make their first party a grand success. The effect produced by turning off the electric lights and using in their place the faint, quivering light of many candles, was "spooky" beyond description. Refreshments were served during the course of the evening.

Weymouth High won its first football game of the season by beating Rockland, 26-7, at Rockland last Friday afternoon.

Come out! Watch Weymouth beat Brockton High at Clapp's field this (Friday) afternoon

Ralph Curtin a graduate of Weymouth High and now holding a government office at Washington D. C. returned to renew his old acquaintances at school during the past week.

At a meeting of the "Boys Glee Club" last Tuesday afternoon, "The Water Mill" by J. C. Macey was selected for immediate use.

The orchestra are now practising "Lustspiel" by Keler Bela.

The girls glee club are preparing a well known operetta "The American Girl" to be given before the Christmas holidays.

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

—Mrs. Dockman and daughter of Newmarket, N. H., are making a visit with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. I. Smith.

—Communion will be observed at the Old North church next Sunday morning.

—The subject at the evening service at 7 o'clock of the Old North church will be "Labelling the Other Man." All are welcome.

—Miss Mercy M. Hunt gave a party for Miss Eleanor Stockbridge on Saturday afternoon, in honor of Eleanor's fourth birthday. The little ones had a merry time playing games of all kinds, after which dainty refreshments were served.

—On Friday evening, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Old North church were invited to a Halloween Party given by the Old South Christian Endeavor Society of South Weymouth. The invitation was accepted by six people from the Heights, all of whom had a most enjoyable evening.

—The "WideAwakes" held a Halloween party at the home of Miss Isabel Jones on Saturday evening. The guests arrived in sheet and pillow-case costumes and after unmasking, indulged in the usual Halloween games and tricks. A most appetizing repast was served and a jolly good time was had by all.

—"Tasks That Are Waiting For the Church of Christ," will be the subject at the Sunday evening meeting of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society, to be held in the Old North chapel at six o'clock.

BANQUET OF REYNOLDS W. R. C.

G. A. R. Man From the West Entertained.

John C. Martin, Past Department Commander of the State Department, G. A. R. of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Martin, were the special guests of Reynolds Women's Relief Corps, on Tuesday night, at a social, entertainment and banquet, held in G. A. R. hall. The committee who had the affair in charge consisted of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Birely, Mrs. Maria Richards, Mrs. Adelaide Marker, Mrs. Emma Lord, Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, Mrs. Lizzie Burr, Mrs. Annie Vogel, Mrs. Jennie Keene and Mrs. Sadie Wolfe. Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Hollis of Weymouth were also guests of the corps. Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney P. P. introduced Commander Martin, and a reception followed. Mr. Martin then gave an address, in which he complimented the Woman's Relief Corps, and the other patriotic societies of Massachusetts for the great work they are doing in keeping patriotism alive. Past Commander Martin is a member of Gen. Lucius Fairchild Post 11, G. A. R. of Madison, Wis. During the war he served as a member of Co. H, 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, and at the close of the war received an honorable discharge. Mr. and Mrs. Martin expect to spend an indefinite time in the east.

The evening's entertainment consisted of readings by Miss Lena Jones, violin selections by Miss Majorie Mills. Mrs. Edith Blackwell sang several soprano solos and Miss Pauline Blackwell gave recitations. There was fancy dancing by Miss Hazel Manuel.

TWO DAYS FAIR.

Seven Ages of Woman Represented At Old South Church Society Event This Week.

The Old South Church Society of South Weymouth held a very successful fair on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week. On Tuesday evening, the Boy Scouts gave the playlet, "A Strenuous Afternoon."

A baby show was given on Wednesday afternoon. In the evening a musical entertainment, in charge of Mrs. Sylvester of Rockland, was given. There was a large attendance on both evenings.

The tables represented the seven ages of woman: babyhood, childhood, sweet sixteen, bridal age, mother, club woman, and grandmother.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE.

Sylvester W. Whalen of 1714 Beacon Street Brookline Has Narrow Escape Last Sunday.

Sylvester W. Whalen of 1714 Beacon street Brookline a lawyer with an office at 60 State street Boston had a narrow escape from being killed when his automobile turned turtle on Washington street Weymouth, near the residence of William Callahan Sunday afternoon. Two other autos were going along ahead of Whalen when they suddenly slowed down and Whalen's auto hit the one directly ahead.

The auto, a new Buick roadster turned turtle. People who witnessed the accident thought that Whalen was killed. The auto was righted and Whalen crawled out from under the machine without a scratch. The only damage done was a sprung axle and a tire torn off. Even the glass windshield was not broken.

Good Work at Weymouth.

"Telephone Topics" has the following snappy story concerning the central telephone office work at the George Strong Company explosion, October 11th: "Several telephone employees were able to render efficient service when a boiler exploded in the shoe factory of the George E. Strong Company, directly across the street from the Weymouth central office, on the morning of October 11th. Hardly had Miss Howley sounded the first alarm when employees of the factory rushed into the telephone office, requesting that calls be made for doctors, nurses, clergymen, and an ambulance. The operators were assisted by Night Operator Nolan, and in a short time District Traffic Manager Field arrived from Quincy with operators Anna Frohock and Mildred Duggan. The rest room was given over to the use of the doctors and nurses, and the men injured by flying bricks and glass were given 'first aid' by Wire Chief Falvey and Lincman Gay. Two of the injured men were removed to their homes by District Traffic Manager Field and Assistant Traffic Manager Crosby. Emergency calls were also made for doctors to attend injured firemen, who were hurt when an auto truck from North Weymouth crashed into a tree."

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

At the Monday meeting of the Selectmen the chairman and all other members of the Board were present.

A petition was received from Edward H. Kavanaugh and others asking the selectmen to lay out and accept Fore River road from Holbrook road to Saunderson street and the board viewed the proposed 'lay out' on Thursday.

A hearing was had on the petition of the Weymouth Light & Power Co. to erect 4 poles on Curtis avenue. No remonstrance and petition was granted. The Light & Power Co. asked permission to erect three ornamental poles in the triangle called Jackson square the same was granted and each pole will carry a double globe light.

The Civil Service Commission authorize a new six months provisional appointment of Edward H. Butler for the police service.

The State Board of Education notify the Selectmen that they approve Miss Lizzie Gilday, Miss Grace Greeley and Miss Mary Diennan as eligible to the Quincy Evening Industrial School.

Voted to request the Water Commissioner to remove the fountain in Commercial square to a point within the curbstone of the Washington school yard and the fountains in Washington and Columbian square are also under consideration.

Voted to authorize the Superintendent of streets to expend $800 in Ward 1, $1000 in Ward 2, $1,000 in Ward 3, $400 in Ward 4 and $800 in Ward 5 for road improvement.

State Forester Rane informs the town that its tax levy for the Gypsy Moth work in 1916 is $5,000.

Rev. Chester J. Underhill appeared before the board asking for information as to a course of Tufts lectures or entertainments the coming season and proffered his assistance free of charge in arranging the same. No definite action was taken.

In response to a hurried call for jurors for the Superior Court session at Dedham, the Selectmen drew John L. Kelley, W. Abbott Howe and Frederick B. Dwyer to serve. Also at the meeting on Tuesday night, the Board voted to call on the Fire Engineer for a complete report on the recent accident, in which Combination One was wrecked; also to ascertain the cause, amount of damage done, cost of repairing, and when same could be completed.

Police Notes.

Last week headquarters were notified of the theft of a gold watch from a citizen of East Weymouth. Chief Pratt went to Boston on a still hunt for it and located the watch in a pawn shop. Later the timepiece was returned to its owner.

Headquarters received a descriptive circular describing a man wanted by the Massachusetts Reformatory, the latter having escaped from that institution.

A communication was received from the Chief of Police of Somerville, asking the police of this town to look out for a man wanted in that city for larceny. Description and picture of the person accompanied the circular.

ANNUAL FAIR.

Ladies' Benevolent Society Holds Successful Event in Old North Church Chapel.

The Ladies Benevolent Society, connected with the Old North church, held their annual fair in the chapel on Friday afternoon and evening, and in spite of the heavy rain storm on that day, the fair was largely attended. The sale tables, which were all well patronized, were presided over by the following as chairmen: Fancy, Mrs. Robert C. Steeler; Apron, Mrs. Charles Macker; Candy, Mrs. Juliet C. Nash; Domestic, Mrs. Charles Taylor; Mystery, Mrs. George J. Ries. From five to six o'clock a supper was served by a very able committee, consisting of Miss Mary F. Loud, Mrs. Frank Richards and Mrs. Albert Newcomb. At eight o'clock an entertainment was given in the church. The program opened with a piano solo by Miss Daisy Michelson of Somerville, which received much applause. The feature of the evening was an illustrated talk on miscellaneous subjects given by Mr. Edward I. Farrington. The program was interspersed with vocal selections by Mrs. John B. Merrill, which were much enjoyed. This year's fair proved to be very successful financially and the ladies feel well repaid for their hard work.

SOUTH SHORE MORNING MUSICALS

Interesting Program Announced For Coming Season. Opening Meeting Yesterday in East Weymouth.

The South Shore Morning Musicals, composed of professional artists residing along the south shore, opened its 1915-16 season yesterday morning at 10 o'clock when "Organ Day" was held in the East Weymouth Congregational church. Miss Ethel Raymond was in charge and an interesting program was given:

The organization is a new venture in this section, but is receiving hearty support and promises to be a grand success in social affairs in this vicinity. The officers are: Mrs. Charles Putnam, East Braintree, president; Mrs. Albert Avery, East Braintree, vice president; Miss Emma Clapp, Weymouth, recording secretary; Miss Alice Holbrook, Holbrook, corresponding secretary; Miss Mary Dyer, Braintree, treasurer; Mrs. T. H. Emerson, East Braintree, auditor and Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, Weymouth, historian.

Meetings have been arranged to April 27 and the following program is announced for the remainder of the season:

Dec. 2. Development of Music, Mrs. Thompson, East Weymouth.

Dec. 16. Mr. Stuart Mason, Miss Emma Clapp, Front street, Weymouth.

Dec. 30. The Violin, Miss Ellis, Washington street, Braintree.

Jan. 13. Concert. Miss Minnie Little Longley, Bates' opera house; Miss Barbara Werner, Mrs. Georgie Pray Lassele. Singer to be announced.

Jan. 27. Morning with Grig, Mrs. Putnam, Mrs. Emily Hagen, Bellevue road, East Braintree.

Feb. 10. Musical form, Symphony opera, Miss Holbrook, Washington street, South Braintree.

Feb. 24. Folk Song, Mrs. Avery, East Braintree.

Mar. 9. Music in America, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster, Weymouth.

Mar. 23. Concert, Miss Virginia Walker, harpist; Mrs. Louise Lathrop Mellows, pianist; Mrs. Frances Appleton, violinist; Miss Helen Allen Hunt, contralto.

Apr. 30. Beethoven, Miss Dyer, Mrs. W. T. Chase, 140 Adams street, Braintree.

Apr. 27. Gentlemen's Night for active members and their guests.

Associate tickets may be procured from the treasurer, Miss Mary Dyer, 140 Adams street, Braintree, or from any of the active members. They entitle the holder to attend the two concerts at Bates' Opera House and two of the morning meetings of her own choosing and the privilege of bringing a guest to each concert.

Sports in Town

In a cold, driving rain the Weymouth High school football team lost to the Brockton eleven 24 to 0 last Friday.

The C. M. A. bowling team pinned defeat on the Knights of Columbus quintet on the C. M. A. alleys last Friday night. Loring, Cunningham, F. Nolan, Elkington and White rolled 1399 against 1242 for Mauro, H. Ellard, J. Nolan, Sullivan and T. Noonan. Benny Elkington was high, with a three string total of 318 and a single of 119. The K. of C. boys say the story will be different on the next match.

Monday Club.

The Monday Club will hold its next meeting at Odd Fellows hall on the afternoon of November 15th. An enjoyable afternoon is to be spent with Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler Rice, who will read "Miss Hobbs," a comedy of today by Jerome K. Jerome.

The cake and candy sale of the afternoon will be in charge of Mrs. Melzar S. Burrell.

Writes Verses On Exposition.

The San Francisco Chronicle recently held a verse contest under the general title "Impressions of the Exposition." Of course Weymouth was represented, and we publish below the verses contributed by Emily White, a former resident of Weymouth.

A RETROSPECT

BY EMILY VINCENT WHITE, BERKELEY.
The sky had lost its golden after-glow
The brightness fled from earth. In the twilight Brooded the shadows of the coming night.
Then came a reign of phantasy. For lo!
Out of the mists beyond the utmost flow
Of the wide bay rises a city bright
In sober gray save for the rose red light
That gleams afar from some high tower aglow.
O beautiful vision of a charmed hour!
O Jewel City with heart of fire, Risen from dreams of long ago! Ah never Pass from our ken, fair minarets and tower,
Still glow with the light of fulfilled desire
And make of thy beauty a joy forever.

MASONIC VISITATION.

Orphans' Hope Lodge A. F. & A. M. Receive District Deputy, Suite and Guests.

R. W. Gardner R. P. Barker, D. D. G. M. of the 26th Masonic District of Massachusetts, completed his round of visits, for the year, to the several lodges in the district by a visit to Orphans' Hope Lodge of Weymouth last Friday night.

The District Deputy had an able Suite in the following officers: W. B. Carroll E. Bates, D.D.G.S.W.; W. B. Walter J. Harrison, D.D.G.J.W.; W. B. W. Edward Gutterson, G. Treasurer; W. B. Ernest W. Rogers, G. Treasurer and W. B. Charlie W. Dunbar, Grand Marshall.

Special guests of the District Deputy were W. B. D. W. Gilbert, D.D.G.M. of the 29th District; W. B. A. N. Dickerman, P. D. D. of the 29th District; W. B. Charles G. Jordan and Edward F. Sterling, Past Masters of Delta Lodge; W. B. A. L. Rich and H. L. Thomas, P. M. of Old Colony Lodge; W. B. A. W. Rich, W. M. of Old Colony Lodge; Bro. A. N. Hunt, S. W. of Delta Lodge; Bro. G. W. White, S. W. of Norfolk Union Lodge.

Weather conditions were not particularly inviting for people to be out but there was a large attendance of local members of the lodge and many visitors from other lodges and the event was one of the most interesting of the season's visitations.

A pleasing feature of the hour came near the close when Wor. Bro. Frank H. Torrey in behalf of his mother, presented to the Lodge an elegant clock as a memorial of her husband, the late Alexis Torrey, one of the early members of the Lodge and although for many years a non-resident of the town always maintaining a deep interest in its affairs. Wor. Bro. M. E. Hawes was called upon to respond to the presentation.

SUNDAY NIGHT FORUM.

Large Audience At Weekly Gathering in Church in Lincoln Square.

A crowded auditorium greeted the speaker at the Sunday night forum service held in the First Baptist church Weymouth under the auspices of the Community Service Union. Rev. Chester J. Underhill, pastor of the church presided.

Guy D. Gold, the executive secretary of the New American Association of Brockton and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, gave the address, his theme being "Community Idealism: The Answer to Socialism." An orchestra of 10 men rendered several selections during the evening.

Exhibit of New England Products.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company and the Central New England Railway Company are making an exhibit of products of the farms and waters of Southern New England at the South Station, Boston, Mass., and visitors to the South Station recently who have witnessed this display have received a vivid impression not only of the sea food products, for which this part of the country is famous, but also of some of the agricultural products of Southern New England.

The exhibition is in large glass cases, one of which contains specimens of sea food products such as lobsters, mackerel, oysters, clams and crabs. These products are contained in glass jars, and are preserved in a special solution prepared for this purpose, which keeps the contents of the jars in their natural state.

In another case are jars containing specimens of Southern New England's fruit and vegetable products. There are samples of peaches, pears, apples, strawberries, plums, grapes, cranberries, celery, etc., that have been grown in Southern New England during the past season.

It is the intention of the Industrial Bureau of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and the Central New England Railway, under whose direction this exhibit has been arranged, to extend it considerably in the near future so that practically every product that is produced extensively in Southern New England and that may be exhibited in this manner will be displayed.

The growing of vegetables, small fruit and truck in Southern New England is already a large industry in this section, but the possibilities of growth in the production of these food products are unexcelled. The consumption of small fruits, vegetables and truck is growing more rapidly than the production, and the demand for such products may be shown from the estimate of one authority in one of the Southern New England states.

This authority states that the consumption of food products in that particular state is $80,000,000 per annum while the production of such food products is a bare $20,000,000 per annum.

NEW PASTOR PREACHES.

Rev. Fred A. Line From Atlanta, Ga., Began Duties Last Sunday.

REV. FRED A. LINE

Rev. Fred A. Line, the new pastor of Second Universalist church in South Weymouth began his duties last Sunday morning when a large audience turned out to welcome the new comer.

Rev. Mr. Line's theme was "Our Confession of Faith". Mrs. Mildred Fish presided at the organ and a vested choir, directed by Miss Annie Deane, sang.

The new pastor was born in Springfield, Penn., June 22, 1881. When he was 6 years of age, the family moved to Lanesville, Penn. He graduated from High school in 1898 and from the Slippery Rock Normal school in 1899. After teaching school for one year he entered the Canton, N. Y. Theological school from which he graduated in 1901, as the honor student of his class.

In the same year he married Miss Mabel Allen of Canton, N. Y. They have two daughters, Miss Helen and Miss Edith Line.

Rev. Mr. Line has held pastorates at Winthrop, Albany N. Y., Fort Jackson N. Y., Junction City, Kan. and Atlanta, Ga. On Sunday afternoon Rev. Mr. Line will supply the pulpit of the Universalist church in Assinippi.

MRS. MARY SMITH DEAD.

Widow of Cornelius Smith Passed Away Last Saturday afternoon At Her Home on Sterling street.

Mrs. Mary Smith widow of Cornelius Smith died Saturday afternoon at her home on Sterling street aged 72.

She is survived by three daughters Mrs. Joseph Kelley of this town, Mrs. Katherine Woods and Mrs. Elizabeth Gage of Braintree, four sons George of this place, Thomas of East Weymouth, Albert of Rockland and Richard of Marlboro, a sister Mrs. Ann McCue of East Weymouth and two brothers Frank Smith of Quincy and John Smith of New York.

The funeral took place Tuesday from the church of the Sacred Heart. Rev. J. B. Holland celebrated mass. Interment was in the family lot at St. Mary's cemetery West Quincy.

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

Weymouth Council 729, K. of C., Perfecting Plans For Interesting and Enjoyable Social Season.

Social events at the Knights of Columbus hall, under the auspices of Council 729, promise to be many and very enjoyable this season, if plans already started mature as expected.

A glie club has been formed, under the direction of Edward O'Brien. The club will have several musical evenings and will be instructed by a competent instructor. A series of whist parties are on the card, with Edward O'Brien also the leading light in this game. Lectures on interesting and timely subjects will be given on alternate Sunday afternoons and Lecturer Frank McCarthy is busy arranging the schedule of these lectures.

William Fitzsimmons is forming a dramatic club among the members, and the Knights are promised several dramatic presentations during the coming months. With the new hustling staff officers, it looks like a big winter for Weymouth Council 729, K. of C.

WEYMOUTH BOARD OF TRADE.

County Farm School and Rail Road Fares Discussed.

The second meeting for the season, of the Board of Trade was held at the Clapp Memorial building, Wednesday evening with the president in the chair.

Records of the previous meeting read and approved. Reports of the several standing committees called for but nothing special was reported.

Next came reports of special committees the first that to which was referred the Norfolk County Farm School. A. P. Worthen chairman of the committee made an extended report of several meetings held and a marked interest in the movement. But one town or city in the County voted against it and all of the others were decidedly in its favor and the County Commissioner will carry out the vote in regard to the issuing of the $75,000 bonds for the purpose. The town of Franklin was the first to file a formal application to have the school in that town. The Weymouth committee are studying the situation and a possible location of the farm, should it be decided to place it in Weymouth.

Mr. Worthen gave much valuable information as to the working of such schools as already established in Essex and Bristol counties. The advantage afforded boys who cannot have or do not care for a college education but want something of a practical every day nature are many as afforded by these schools.

The next question was the much discussed rail road fare and here again Mr. Worthen was the central figure he, being the town counsel had of course followed all of the meeting and hearings in regard to the proposed raise in rates. Much work has been done by the Bay State St. R. Co. and those appointed by towns and cities in preparing the case for the Public Service committee before whom the hearings are now being held.

Experts have been employed to thoroughly investigate the situation as to earnings and expenditures not only of the Bay State system as a whole and the relation of the several districts to the name.

The executive committee of the association of City and Town counsels of the State, of which Mr. Worthen is chairman, have taken the matter up, as cities and towns outside of the Bay State holding have become interested as the feeling is that the Bay State raise if it comes, will be a stepping stone for a raise in all other lines. Gathered from the remarks made the general feeling is that there will be an increase authorized by the Public Service Commission but along somewhat different lines from that now under consideration.

The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

ORPHANS' HOPE LODGE, A. F. & A. M.

Annual Meeting, Reports Acted Upon, Officers Elected and a Story of the War Zone Told.

The annual meeting of Orphans Hope Lodge, A. F. & A. M., was held in Masonic Temple, East Weymouth, last night, and there was a large attendance of members.

The routine business of the evening was reports from the several departments, all of which reports showed the year 1915 to have been a satisfactory one, with the exception of more than the usual number of deaths during the year.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: Stanley T. Torrey, Worshipful Master; Charles H. Chubbuck, Jr., Senior Warden; Henry P. Tilden, Junior Warden; Frank H. Torrey, Treasurer; T. John Evans, Secretary; J. Leonard Bicknell, Senior Deacon; Everett T. Gardner, Junior Deacon; Sidney G. Dunbar, Trustee for three years; Gardner R. P. Barker, Associate Member Board of Masonic Relief; T. J. Evans, Representative of the Lodge in South Shore Masonic Association for three years.

The list of appointed officers was not completed, but will be made before the installation, which according to a vote passed, will be in a measure, a public affair.

At the close of the business, members repaired to the banquet room, where a light lunch was served, and then came a rare treat: Frank Alden, a Boston traveling salesman, spent some three months of the spring and summer in the "war zone" of Europe in the interest of the leather trade, and for an hour and a-half held the closest attention of his hearers with graphic stories of his experience and the conditions existing abroad.

New Idea for Danger Signal.

As a substitute for red in danger signals, which is the color less easily distinguished by the color blind, experts have advocated blue circles with wide yellow rims.

The "Single Damper" in Crawford Ranges is the greatest improvement ever made in stoves. By one motion it regulates fire and oven—push the knob to "Kindle", "Bake", or "Check"—the range does the rest. Better than two or more dampers. Have you seen it?

This Single Damper is patented—no other range has it.

The deep Ash Hod—instead of the old clumsy ash pan—with Coal Hod beside it (patented) is easy to remove—doesn't spill ashes.

* Gas ovens if desired; end [single] or elevated [double].

THE KITCHEN CABINET

If there no longer existed women sufficiently dignified in their manners to inspire real respect, the opinion of society would no longer have any influence over the actions of men.—Madame De Staël.

APPETIZING FISH DISHES.

Canned fish now is such a plentiful article on the market that when fresh fish is not obtainable the tinned variety will answer fully as well. Tuna or tunny fish is one of the most delicious of canned fish and may be served right from the can with quarters of lemon or combined in various ways to serve as salad. Filled tomatoes, stuffed with tuna, well seasoned, celery and cabbage makes a most tasty salad.

Herring Salad.—Cook salt herring 15 minutes in boiling water to cover. Drain and cool and separate into flakes. Add an equal quantity of cubes of cooked potatoes, a half cupful of chopped celery, the whites of two eggs, chopped, and a good boiled dressing. Cover with hard-cooked egg yolk put through a ricer.

Salmon Loaf With Peas.—Season a can of salmon, add a beaten egg, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a cupful of thick, white sauce. Steam in a loaf and serve garnished with cooked peas on a platter.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.—Cook half a tablespoonful of green onion, one tablespoonful of green pepper (both chopped), with a fourth of a cupful of butter, five minutes, stirring constantly. Add four tablespoonfuls of flour, mixed with a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and half a teaspoonful of paprika. Then pour on gradually one cupful each of milk and cream. Bring to the boiling point and cook two minutes. Reserve half a cupful of this sauce and to the remainder add 1½ cupfuls of flaked finnan haddie, when hot fill the center of a rice border with the finnan haddie and pour around the reserved sauce. Garnish with canned pimiento.

Salmon croquettes molded around a teaspoonful of cooked green peas and served hot with a highly seasoned sauce make another tasty dish.

Salt mackerel is delicious soaked overnight or until well freshened then placed in the oven covered with a good cupful of thick cream and allowed to bake 20 minutes. Add salt if needed, just as it is taken up.

Nellie Maxwell

Had a Reason.

A well-known actor, while in a tailor shop one day, happened to notice a man come in, pick up a suit, pay for it and go out again. "At last," he said, "there's one fellow I will never imitate."

Daily Thought.

God grant liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it.—Daniel Webster—Speech, June 2, 1834.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

The dairy barn should be well lighted, well ventilated and well drained.

Now is the time to cut your grapevines back to one or two buds on a stock.

The dairyman cannot afford to keep a boarder cow at the expense of the rest of the herd.

Clean, dry bedding is a prime requisite in the care of live stock. There are no exceptions to this rule.

Briers, bushes and weeds really have no place in the meadows or cultivated fields, and their growth should be carefully kept down.

Turkeys and cabbages are better for remaining out late. The time that they should be secured in this climate is the middle of this month.

A farmer should never be so immersed in political matters, as to forget to sow his wheat, dig his potatoes, and bank up his cellar.

Whenever leaves can be obtained in sufficient quantities, the farmer has within his reach the most ample resources for sustaining and increasing, ad libitum, the productive energy of the soil he cultivates.

If kept in a proper place the temperature of November is favorable for fattening hogs. Give them a dry, warm place; feed often on warm food, and they will lay on flesh and fat from one to two pounds a day.

The cellar windows of root cellars should be open in fair weather until there is danger of freezing, to admit air, but they should also be screened in such a way as to shut out light.

The farmer should not only try to reduce the cost of production, but he should try to produce the best of everything. Quality counts in selling, and any reasonable expense entailed in the production of extra quality in any farm or garden crop will be amply repaid.

Some November days are devoted to felling the timber and piling the wood ready for the sled in winter months. Others, to an examination of the cellar, throwing out the rubbish, and rendering that depository clean and sweet.

Celery may be treated as a highly profitable crop. It deserves the most intelligent care. As moisture is needed regularly it will pay to have a cheap irrigation outfit. Without water celery is not crisp or tender. A light sprinkling of nitrate of soda along the rows helps this crop.

Land that is too wet for the most profitable production of crops, such as wet level land, low spots, and the dry subsoils of flat areas on the summits of knolls, river and creek bottoms, and peat bogs, should be drained. Even uplands may often be drained with profit, especially hill-sides subject to erosion or inclined to be "spouty." Indeed, drainage is profitable wherever it is necessary to the fullest use of the land.

Several grape insects winter among the fallen grape leaves in trash in vineyards and much may be done to destroy them if the trash be raked together and burned. Such work will be of value against the grape-berry moth and the grape leaf-folder, which hibernate in the pupal condition in the fallen grape leaves. The grapevine flea-beetle and the grape leaf-hopper spend the winter as adults under trash of all kinds in and about vineyards, and the destruction of trash as indicated will expose them to adverse climatic conditions.

A great many people have marketed hens and pullets in preference to carrying them along on high-priced feed, when they were getting no return in the way of eggs. This very thing is a good reason for holding on to pullets and yearling hens if you can get pullets laying before real cold, bad weather sets in, you will be well paid for all your trouble and expense. No feed can hardly be too expensive to accomplish this. Feed well and select a properly balanced ration. If your flock is on free range, don't try to make them hunt their own living; force them to the point of laying.

How Much Land There Is.

If all the land now above sea level, 25,000,000 cubic miles, were spread uniformly over the globe, it would form a shell about 660 feet thick.

Did It.

An old countryman, being congratulated by the rector on the fact that her only son had enlisted, said: "Well, sir; after all, it was only to be expected, for, sure, the old proverb says: 'Train up a child and away he goes!'"

Concerning the Fashionable Fox Furs

Foxes will need all their cunning, and much more, if the demand for their pelts does not abate. Just now it seems that every girl wants to wear a red fox, or a white one, coiled about her neck, and a fox muff in which to embed her hands. She dines in airy gowns, but, having removed a coat, her graceful fur is retained, not because the public dining room is cold but because her furs are becoming, and fashion allows her to wear them.

White fox is in demand on evening coats in collars and deep cuffs. Or very light colors and white coats employ fox fur dyed black. It is a long, soft and rich fur but not so durable as some others.

Red fox is especially becoming to auburn-haired, fair-skinned women, and when brown eyes are added to these the effect is so good that even the fox might be reconciled to his fate, could he foresee it.

One of these natural fox sets is shown in the picture. The scarf is held in place by fastening the claws together. In the muff the head is used, but tail and claws are omitted. Fox fur is dyed into several colors, the very dark browns and blacks being favored by the majority of women. Certain species are very high priced, and will not be cheaper. The cross fox and pointed fox are rare—a single skin from the latter is worth several hundred dollars.

Julia Bottomley

Modes in Hair Dressing.

The modes in hairdressing change quite as much as the modes in millinery or clothes. Indeed we have to keep modifying our coiffure to suit the everchanging hat shapes. When the crowns are high we must needs wear our knots on top of our heads to fill in the high crowns. When the flat-crowned shape prevails it means that the hair must be stowed away around the nape of the neck somewhere.

But though hair style changes frequently, this does not mean that we must follow them blindly and obediently regardless of how they appear on us. There is nothing which so transfigures a girl's face as the right kind of coiffure.

AN EVENING WITH DUMAS.

It Was a Cosmopolitan Crowd That Flocked to His Shrine.

Dumas sat like some bronze of a Buddhist temple, while his guests stood or moved about, conversing with him or among themselves, writes Francis Grierson in the Century, describing an evening with the great novelist. A famous comedian from the Gymnase exchanged jokes with a tragedian from the Theatre Francais, a witty journalist was conversing with a gifted singer from the Theatre Lyric, an artist with flowing hair and a huge pince nez was begging a professional beauty to give him a series of sittings for her portrait, a novelist on the qui vive for copy seemed to see, hear and appropriate everything and everybody all at once.

A young poetess and an aged dramatist were discussing the latest plays. A Russian countess, tall, slender, insinuating, clad all in black, made me think of a character I had seen in a fantastic pantomime. She gilded about mysteriously and, stopping at Dumas' chair, placed her long, thin hand on his shoulder for some moments, like a ghostly visitor with a fatal message, and then glided away. Austrians, Italians, Germans, mingled their accent with the accent of the true Parisian. But Dumas was more than a Parisian; he was a cosmopolitan at a time when there were no cosmopolitan Frenchmen, and he gave me the impression of a man who had seen life in every aspect.

He might as well have said in so many words: "My mind is made up. Do not give yourself the trouble to tell me what is going on in England or America or in the country of the Grand Turk or among the nabobs of India. I know as much as they know. You see me sitting here contented enough as things are. All these charming women of talent are my friends" (as a matter of fact, there was not an old woman in the room). "A man is not the author of books like 'Monte Cristo' without some recompense."

No one would have taken him for a celebrated author. He had the air of a man who had done nothing all his life but invent, taste and prepare luxurious dishes at a restaurant patronized by wealthy gourmets.

NUNOBIKI WATERFALLS.

Bewitching Night Scene at a Popular Japanese Resort.

A sight in the summer life of Japan not easily forgotten is procured in a night visit to the Nunobiki waterfall, just outside Kobe on the northeast. There are two falls, the lower or female fall of forty-three feet and the upper or male fall of eighty feet, the water gushing in each case out of the hill above and falling down the gorge to a whirling pool below. It is reached by an easy, winding climb up the cliffs of the "Million Fireflies"—tiny electric bulbs in thousands among the trees—and the thousands and thousands of gayly clad women and children visitors shepherded by the more somber clad men give the traveler two distinctly delightful sensations before reaching the illuminated falls themselves.

The tiny lights come and go among the trees in a bewitching way. The single light, says the Kobe Chronicle, which illuminates the higher fall will perhaps appeal to many rather than the colored lights thrown on the lower fall, and the lamp rays giving the fountain the hues of the rainbow may be regarded as artificial. Nevertheless the general effect is attractive.

To any one who knows China it is impossible not to draw a comparison favorable to the Japanese in viewing the crowd. Entrance to the gorge is perfectly free, yet thousands flocking there every evening are neatly dressed in summer garments, every one clean and respectable, while the conduct of the great crowd is orderly and marked by a sense of quiet enjoyment. Such a scene would be almost impossible in China, and until the idea of personal cleanliness can be introduced among the swarming millions of that country we are afraid the Japanese will continue to look down upon their neighbors as inferior.

Origin of the Caucus.

The origin of the American caucus dates back to Revolutionary days, being traced to the Caucus club of Boston. This club was composed mainly of persons engaged in shipbuilding. It was one of the most radical opponents of British oppression. The Caucus club and the Merchants' club of the same period used to meet before elections and agree on candidates for town and provincial offices. "Caucus" is believed to be a corruption of "caulkers."

The Heat of Australia.

Australia is the hottest country on record. I have ridden for miles astride the equator, but I have never found heat to compare with this. Out in the country in the dry times there appears to be little more than a sheet of brown paper between you and the lower regions, and the people facetiously say that they have to feed their hens on cracked ice to keep them from laying boiled eggs.—Sydney Telegraph.

Her Hard Task.

"That's a beautiful girl you have in your store," said the man acquaintance. "I've seen her in the window several days as I passed." "She isn't an employee," the milliner answered wearily. "She's a woman going to decide on a new hat."—Buffalo Express.

Weather Note.

"Looks like rain for our outing to-morrow." "Just our luck! How would it do to telephone the weather bureau?" "No good. But you might make an appeal to the clearing house."—Boston Transcript.

Old Naval Custom.

"Show a leg or else a purser's stocking" is the cry with which sailors in the navy are awakened. The words date back to the time when women were allowed to go on the cruises. They were permitted to stay aboard later than the men, and showed a "purser's stocking" to prove that they needn't get up.

The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

The hearing before the Public Service Board on the matter of increased fares on our street railways has been on in full blast for the week and promises to be quite an event as time goes on. The chairman of the board thinks the remonstrants have too many cooks for the broth and a lack of system in their work. Every city or town within the district appears with a representative committee or attorney and they handle the matter from different standpoints as local conditions vary.

The problem is a difficult one to handle and, no doubt, there are compromises to be made in order to be fair to the transportation companies as well as to the people.

The death of the Whitman baby who ate a tablet of bichloride of mercury is but one of many fatal results of carelessness in the handling of poisons. To have any form of poison where children can reach it is an inexcusable carelessness. In many homes bottles containing poisonous medicines are kept on an open medicine shelf or closet side by side with tooth paste. In this case the bright red label which protects the grown person allured the child. But the children are not the only ones who lose their life through carelessness in taking medicine from the wrong bottle, for every year many adults, who have no one but themselves to blame, perish in this most needless way. It has been suggested that only bottles of a distinctive type or shape be used to contain poison. A poison label is no protection to a careless person reaching for a bottle in the dark. But the only positive way is to make sure of what you're taking before you take it and keep poisons absolutely out of the reach of children.

"The Deep Purple."

Miss Nellie Gill is an actress of exceptional talent; everyone who has seen her in "Within the Law," "The Young Mrs. Winthrop," or "Paid In Full," will agree to that. "The Deep Purple" is a play of exceptional merit; everyone who has ever seen it will as readily agree to that. But those who have never had the opportunity of seeing this great drama of contemporary life may be interested in reading what some of the critics have had to say about it. The following quotations are from the reviews of "The Deep Purple," in some of the most influential city newspapers:

"It is a forceful presentation of things that happen in every-day life, skillfully handled by the author."—N. Y. Journal.

"Tells a remarkably striking and realistic domestic story. Has registered a vivid success. Will be prosperous and long-lived."—Vogue.

"Holds the interest throughout."—Theatre Magazine.

"There can be no two opinions as to its artistic merit."—Brooklyn Citizen.

"A gripping drama. The production is one that not only entertains but grips. It is a lesson from life and a mighty good one."—Newark Star.

This production, with Miss Nellie Gill as "Frisco Kate," will be seen at Bates Opera House, Weymouth, on Tuesday, November 16th.

Sacred Heart Parochial School Opens.

The new school room for the Sacred Heart Parochial school in Weymouth was completed last Saturday night and opened for the first time on Monday morning, when the pupils changed their quarters from the convent to the up-to-date rooms. The rooms are well lighted and modern in every way. A large American flag adds to the appearance of the new school.

33rd Annual Fair.

The 33rd annual fair of the Ladies' Cemetery Improvement association of Weymouth and East Braintree opened yesterday afternoon in Bates opera house. Well stocked tables, good crowds and a fine entertainment in the evening were features. The fair continues this afternoon and evening with a drama "The Teaser" in three acts this evening. A complete report of the event will appear in next week Gazette.

—James and Leo Madden, together with James Gilligan are featured as end men in the A. O. H. minstrel show at Abington next Friday evening. Evidently the fame of last year's St. Francis Xavier minstrel show has reached Abington.

—The ladies of the Universalist church held their monthly supper in the vestry last evening. The Campfire girls of the Union church furnished the entertainment. The playlet "Made to Order" was given. The parts were taken by Ruth Ford, Marie Davis, Gertrude Davis, Marion Proctor and Emma Johnson.

—The Jolly Twenty Whist club met with Miss Clara Hersey on Tuesday evening. The honors were taken by Mrs. Arthur Brockett and William Ducker.

—Mrs. Fred A. Line and her children arrived this week from Georgia to join her husband, the Rev. F. A. Line, the newly appointed pastor of the Universalist church.

—James E. Frizzell, a former station agent at the South Weymouth station, died Tuesday morning at his home in Whitman after being stricken with a shock. Mr. Frizzell was very popular while a resident of the town and by his efficiency and willingness to aid the merchants of the town, added many friends to his side. He was a native of Randolph and was a member of Rockland Council K. of C. and also the A. O. H.

—A party from Willey lodge motored to King Solomon lodge, Dorchester, Tuesday evening to witness second degree work.

—Mrs. Fred Davis of Pond street has been operated on for appendicitis at the Brockton hospital.

—Miss Elizabeth Wickborn of Dorchester spent the week end with Miss Alice Sullivan of Main street.

—Miss Jennie Deane, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zebulun Deane of Hollis street was married on Wednesday evening to Alfred Bengston of Holbrook at Newtonville. The wedding was a quiet one, owing to the recent death of the bride's father.

—The Fin-de-Siecle whist club met with Mrs. Wilton Hawes on Tuesday evening. The honors were taken by Mrs. Guy Hiatt and Miss Helen Bass. Refreshments were served. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Stephen Pratt.

—Mrs. Theron Tirrell is reported as improving from a serious illness.

—Mrs. Gertrude Cook has returned home after a week's visit to her sister, Mrs. John C. Poole of Providence, R. I.

—The Tuesday evening whist club met with Mrs. Joshua Prescott of Pond street this week.

—Miss Pearl Chandler is having a two weeks' vacation from her duties at H. W. Barnes.

—The Old Colony club's annual theatrical will be presented on Thursday, Nov. 18th. This year's production is to be "Green Stockings."

—Leo O'Dowd returned Monday after spending a week with former school-mates in New York.

—Viola Gourley returned from Boothbay hospital on Wednesday.

—Rev. Fred A. Line read one of the Rev. Henry A. Rose lectures, "Our National Capitol and Mount Vernon" at the Universalist church last Sunday evening. A concert by Miss Helen Richards preceded the lecture. A large attendance was reported.

The Dignity of Labor

A Story Showing Its Change
In Half a Century

By JOHN Y. LARNED

During the past half century a great change has come over what we call the dignity of labor—not that labor is a more honorable calling than formerly, but it is so regarded. In America we took originally our ideas concerning trade and labor from England, where neither was then regarded as a fit occupation for a gentleman. Fifty years ago one might not in America sell goods at retail and maintain a first class social position. The daughters of gentlemen and ladies could not earn money without being taboo by persons of their own set.

Today our merchants and social prices are retailers. The daughters of well to do persons prefer to work rather than wait for husbands, and many a young man with a taste for mechanics prefers to make his start in the machine shop rather than in the counting room.

Nevertheless snobbishness has not died out. It will never die, filling its ranks mostly from the get-rich-quick element. Modern high social life is a combination of refined persons and snobs. For the snobs nothing is quite good enough. Refined men think little of taking off their coats and doing a bit of carpenter work about their homes. Their wives are every day coming more and more to dispense with hired help.

One August day a young man knocked at the door of Mrs. Bradbury, who lived in a small town called Glendale, situated in a beautiful valley, and said to her:

"I am looking for a place to spend a month in which to regain health impaired from overwork. I have been told that if I can get you to take me in I will be very pleasantly situated."

The lady looked the young man over and consented to take him to board and treat him, if he so wished, as a member of her family. He gave his name as Charles Treat, but concerning his antecedents or his occupation said nothing. The accepting of Mr. Treat as a member of the family meant more to him than would at first appear. Glendale society was more than usually pleasant, and Mrs. Bradbury, whose ancestors had been its leaders in former times, though she was now poor, retained her membership. Many good men and women had of late years been admitted to social companionship, but the snob had not been kept out. Nevertheless Glendale social life was sufficiently progressive to take persons for their intrinsic worth.

For the first week of his sojourn in Glendale Charles Treat divided his day between sitting on Mrs. Bradbury's porch and taking walks in the country round about. Then Mrs. Bradbury, finding that he was growing impatient to get back to work, suggested that he would be better satisfied to remain if he had some companionship and offered to introduce him to the young men and young women of the place. Treat consented and became a member of the younger social circle of Glendale.

There were tennis courts there, in which those devoted to outdoor sports gathered, and Treat found the game both attractive and of advantage to his health. He was well liked, though not what is called popular. Popular young men and women in society are usually ephemeral. Unless they have sterling qualities they are liable to drop out of the esteem in which they are held, taking a back seat. Among the more refined young men and women Treat was considered an equal; among those whose parents had recently got rich he found little favor. They required some information as to what was his occupation, and he did not seem inclined to gratify their curiosity.

Treat took more especially to tennis than to the other methods of recreation. He played a good game, though at the time, his health having been impaired by overwork, he did not play a strong one. It was noticed that he was dreamy—that is, he was liable to be thinking of something else than what he was doing. On several occasions while at tennis, struck by a sudden thought while a ball was to be sent back, he would let it go by without seeing it. This was not acceptable to his partner when he had one and gained him the name of "woolgatherer." One of the young men who noticed this idiosyncrasy declared that Treat was either mad or a genius, adding that geniuses were part lunatic and, after all, there was not much difference between the two. But the others would not agree to this.

In these days wealth counts for so much those possessing it naturally become social leaders. Among the young ladies of Glendale was Miss Martha Broadnax, whose father had made a great deal of money in manufacturing bones into fertilizing material. Miss Broadnax, being able to entertain more richly than any of the young women of Glendale, naturally fell into the position of leader of the younger set. About the time that Mrs. Bradbury introduced Charles Treat this young woman had begun to assume the right to pass upon any person who was received within the circle. Not having been consulted as to Treat's admission, she was not especially gracious to him. When asked for a reason for not approving of him she said that no one knew anything about him. He might be a plumber; he might be a "counter jumper"; he might be a carpenter. Since Miss Broadnax's father had made his money out of the bones of rotting animals the strictures involved in her denunciation of these occupations did not come with good grace.

A certain Miss MacKnight, whose father had been a judge on the bench, on hearing of Miss Broadnax's remarks said that the world had improved in its estimate of persons in separating those of refinement from their occupations; that it was possible for a plumber, a "counter jumper" or a carpenter to be a refined man and it was possible for a gentleman to engage in the manufacture of fertilizing material.

This bit of repartee was appreciated by those of the old school who were not especially pleased with Miss Broadnax's assumption of the right to turn down persons on account of their occupations. However, Miss Broadnax from her own standpoint won a signal victory.

One day an automobile drew up in haste in front of Mrs. Bradbury's house. Mr. Treat got out, hustled into the car and was carried away. It so happened that Miss Broadnax was passing Mrs. Bradbury's at the time in her limousine and, seeing the departure of Mr. Treat, took it into her head that he had been carried away by a plain clothes policeman. Resolving to make sure of the matter, she ordered her chauffeur to follow.

Twenty miles from Glendale the auto containing Treat drew up at a large factory. The young man alighted and entered one of the buildings. Miss Broadnax drove up to the office and, introducing herself as a daughter of Peter Broadnax, the great manufacturer of fertilizing material, asked to be shown through the works. Her application was granted with alacrity, and during her inspection she caught sight of Charles Treat in a pair of overalls bending over a machine.

"Greasy mechanic!" she exclaimed to herself. "I knew there was something the matter with him. If he isn't a criminal he's a common laborer, and that's not much better." So Miss Broadnax was driven back to Glendale and the next day gave out that whatever the others of the social circle did in the premises she would no longer countenance Mr. Treat.

There was a time when her statement that she had discovered that a member of the social circle of Glendale worked in overalls in a factory would have been sufficient to eject him. In the twentieth century there is a broader view of such matters. Mr. Treat was not turned down by his associates, but was treated by different ones in different ways. He returned to them in a few days without mentioning where he had been and soon noticed that something had happened. Some of his former associates scarcely noticed him, some treated him as usual, and he noticed that Miss MacKnight was unusually cordial.

No one felt obliged to tell Mr. Treat he had been tracked to a factory and had been seen in overalls, and since he was ignorant of this fact some time was required for him to realize that he was among certain persons persona non grata. Naturally Miss MacKnight's cordial treatment of him drew him to her, he supposing that he was attractive to her. The young lady, unwilling that he should mistake the cause of the favor she showed him, finally told him the story of Miss Broadnax following him to the factory, which explained the coolness shown him by certain members of the social circle.

Treat held his ground in Glendale till the last of August, when he departed, and a few days later every one of his associates there received an invitation to inspect a new cannon he had invented at the Duckworth Arms company on an early day in September, the day after Labor day. It was the Duckworth Arms company's factory where Mr. Treat had been seen in overalls.

Naturally the announcement that Treat was an inventor and had perfected—as he had done his own workmanship—a new cannon created quite a stir in the Glendale social circle. There were girls in that circle who were looking out to marry an establishment and would be only too glad to marry a man in overalls if he were a successful inventor made rich by his inventions. As to the young men, they had long passed beyond the narrow ideas of their forefathers, and there was not one of them who would not gladly have stepped into the shoes of a man who was capable of even trying to invent a gun.

The invitation was generally accepted, the only girl declining being Miss Broadnax, she not having the face to put in an appearance. They were received by Treat in a private room in which he had worked out his gun scheme, and before taking them to view his gun he made them a little address, in which he gave a brief account of his struggles as an inventor, assuring them that had he not been educated as a mechanic he could not have succeeded, since a practical knowledge of mechanics was involved in his work. He then led them into a foundry building in which the gun was set up. There he explained to them that at the breaking out of the European war he had been engaged in inventing a new cannon and had been endeavoring to interest the United States government in it, but had failed. Since then he had induced the war department to furnish the means to construct the gun which they saw before them. He then gave them a demonstration of its workings. Treat's gun has lately been proved successful and a large order given for its manufacture. It is said that he is engaged to marry Miss MacKnight.

"It's a Pleasure to Bake with a Magee Range"

ONE movement of the damper throws the entire heat through the special Magee sheet flues, and sends the heat under the six boiling holes and around five sides of the oven. This means a hotter oven and saves your fuel.

Magee glass oven doors make it possible to see the condition of your roast or your baking without stooping or opening oven door.

SURVEYS MADE AND PLANS PREPARED FOR THE LAND COURT

IN THE BELGIAN CONGO

WHITE TRADER AND NATIVE SERVANTS

GET out your atlas, turn to the map of Africa, run your finger down the west coast of the continent that Livingstone and Stanley made famous until you have crossed the equator and reach the Congo river, direct your course up that majestic stream and in due season you will come to the town of Boma—that is, provided you have the right kind of atlas.

Boma doesn't cut much of a figure on the map. It is the capital of Belgian Congo and Americans have been content for the most part to let it go at that. But since the war broke out food supplies have been curtailed, and now the people of Belgian Congo are having a chance to sample American products.

Credit for the opening of this new field is due to a Detroit man, Harry A. McBride, American consul at Boma.

"That portion of Africa with which I am familiar offers unlimited possibilities for American prospectors and manufacturers," said Mr. McBride, when last at home on vacation. "Belgian Congo, for example, is one-third as large as the United States. It has 9,000,000 natives and only 5,000 whites. One thousand miles up the Congo river from the coast—and that is quite a way, you know—are diamond and gold concessions held by Americans that are said to be among the best in the world and only need developing. There are about thirty American prospectors in the district now, nearly all from California. There will probably be more before there are less, for once a movement of that nature gets started it spreads rapidly.

"There are rich copper deposits in some localities, and one field is said to excel in extent and richness the best mines in this country. At present they are each month taking out 1,000 tons of clear copper, and they have scarcely started. Iron ore is found in great quantities and there are other deposits of metal, while much of the country, if it was accessible, would lend itself to agriculture on a profitable basis.

Natives Kill Prospectors.
"In spite of what commerce and the missionaries have done, prospecting is still fraught with great danger in many localities, for the natives harbor intense hatred for the whites and will kill them upon the slightest provocation.

"It might seem that controlling these savages would be a simple thing. As a matter of fact, they know all the time what is taking place, and no matter how remote the village no white man can enter it in such a way as to surprise the natives. They are looking for you every time. One reason for this lies in the splendid system of wireless communication they maintain. A log is hollowed out, usually a good-sized one. Over the ends of this are stretched dried leopard skins, forming a head, and when a native armed with a heavy club or a hammer pounds on this log there follows a penetrating boom that can be heard for miles through the forest. They seem to have a generally recognized code of signals, and the coming of strangers is passed along the line with astonishing rapidity.

"There is another time when these crude drums come into play. This is when the tax collector makes his rounds. All the natives are supposed to pay an annual head tax, ranging from $1 to $2.40, according to their employment and income. Naturally, the collector is unpopular. Consequently, as he makes his rounds the dull boom of drums reverberates through the jungle, and when he reaches a village he is liable to find only the chief and a handful of subjects. Where are the others of the tribe? Ah! With much weeping and many protestations the chief asserts that a plague swept over them and they are all dead excepting the faithful few. The lie is palpable, but as there is no way of determining the number of those liable to taxation the receipts suffer very materially. In fact, since a cessation of the atrocities credited to King Leopold and his agents was forced the revenues of the colony have fallen off to such an extent that it requires careful work to make ends meet sometimes. Rubber and ivory are still exported in large quantities, and coconuts cultivated along the coast.

"Firearms are not supposed to be sold to the natives any more. However, they are at liberty to buy gunpowder for those still in their possession, although bullets are barred. They get around this by taking steel nails, wire and various things, cutting them into bits and using these for bullets. You can imagine what happens when a human or an animal gets a charge of chopped steel nails in his hide.

Excel American Indians.
"As archers the African natives excel the American Indian at his best, a thing that surprised me, while as metal workers there is no comparison. The Africans still use great numbers of bows and arrows. The latter are three feet long, very heavy, and fitted with the most wicked-looking barbs of giant proportions that I ever saw. If one of those barbs entered a human, and he survived, it would be necessary to cut him pretty well to pieces in order to get the arrows out of his anatomy. They also use poison-tipped arrows, which are fatal to anything living that they strike.

"Some of the finest examples of metal working I ever saw are produced by these natives in their crude forges and with the primitive tools they make for themselves. Their battleaxes are positive works of art, heavy, but carefully wrought and skillfully finished. Their knives are the finest steel. They have a strange way of keeping score with these same axes. Whenever an ax has done its deadly work, be it taking a human life or merely lopping off a finger or amputating an ear by way of emphasis, another pair of eyes and another nose are carved on one of the crossbars. And when all the available space has been given over to these ghastly reminders of bloodshed the ax is cast aside, another is brought into play and a new score started.

According to Mr. McBride, the natives are, as a rule, well paid for their services, being given four to six dollars a month and their rations—rice, dried fruits, etc. They are largely vegetarians, although game of all kinds is plentiful and much is killed for food purposes. The natives consider boa constrictor a delicacy out-rivalling chicken, and are not at all particular as to the length of time these giant snakes have been dead before being devoured or the exact manner in which they came to an end.

Antelope, hippopotamus, crocodiles and other tropical denizens inhabit the rivers and the forests, and leopards are so common as to attract little attention.

Boma is 46 miles up the Congo river from the coast. Matadi, 25 miles further, is the principal seaport. From here inbound cargoes are transferred to a railroad running to Stanley Pool, 240 miles distant, beyond the rapids that prevent navigation. Here the freight is placed aboard river steamers for distribution along the 9,000 miles of navigable waterways that extend into the interior. That short stretch of railway happens to be one of the most remunerative enterprises in Africa in good times. Every pound passing over the rails—and there is no other way to travel—is assessed heavily.

There are about 170 white residents in Boma, most of them Belgian officials. It is not exactly the place one would select as a health resort. Live stock cannot exist there, because it contracts the sleeping sickness. Bees are brought down the coast on sailing vessels, killed as wanted, and when the stock is exhausted others are imported, but no attempt is made at breeding cattle. There being no horses, carriages have no place. Instead there is a single-wheeled chair, called a push-push, with a native in front to pull and another at the back to maintain the equilibrium. Taxicab rates are not exorbitant. It is possible to obtain a push-push and two natives for six dollars a month, or thereabouts.

All She Wanted to Know.
"But what is his reputation? That is the principal thing." "Well, papa, he is reputed to spend $50,000 a year. That's good enough for me!"—Judge.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

SEVENTEEN-YEARS AGO.

By the will of the late Miss Katherine S. Cushing bequests were made as follows: $100 to the Ladies' Cemetery Improvement Association and $100 to the Ladies' Social Circle, connected with the First Universalist Society.

The request of the Senior class to hold a reception at the high school building on the evening of Nov. 23 was granted. The gymnasium will be fully equipped at that time and those who contributed to the equipment will be invited to inspect it.

The regular monthly meeting of the South Shore Co-operative bank was held Monday evening. The seventeenth semi-annual statement showed the assets and liabilities of the bank to be $71,970.94 and a dividend for the past six months credited at the rate of six cents per annum.

Easton claims its share of Weymouth people as first settlers, with other towns of Mass. In 1692 or '93, Clement Briggs went to Easton and returned to Weymouth. The next year he organized a party of fifteen men, and they, with fifteen from Taunton and twelve from Bridgewater were known as "The Squatters" of Easton.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Somebody is evidently using their utmost efforts to wreck some of the Brain-tree and Weymouth cars. Friday night a sail was laid across the tracks opposite the McCarty place. Motorman Oliver saw the obstruction in time to prevent an accident.

There have been fairs, there are fairs, and it is more than probable that there will be fairs in the future, but the one now progressing in the vestry of the Immaculate Conception is truly the Fair and is receiving a well merited share of attention and deserves to be and no doubt will be, a social and financial success.

At the annual meeting of Orphans Hope Lodge, for the election of officers, held in Masonic building Wednesday evening, W. T. Rice was elected W. M.; J. M. Whitcomb, S. W.; W. O. Collier, J. W.; Frank D. Thayer, treasurer; T. J. Evans, secretary; Z. L. Bicknell, T. H. Humphrey, A. F. Bullock, trustees.

The sidewalk committee, which has been superintending the construction of the smoke stack for the new power house of M. C. Dizer & Co., is relieved of duty. The cap was placed on the lofty structure last Tuesday and over all was placed the stars and stripes which waved in the breeze amid the shouts of the multitude and a salute of whistles from adjacent factories.

THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Isaac Williams cooked a mess of green peas last Tuesday, which were raised by a friend at North Weymouth, from a second crop.

The excellent condition of the roads is proofs that our Surveyors are masters of the situation. Those who are obliged to travel will take notice that our roads are second to none in the country.

The Gen. Bates Engine Co. are going to have a banquet in Temple Banquet hall, next Monday evening. The Conqueror Engine Co., of So. Weymouth and the Eureka H. & L. Co. have been invited.

Among the awards for exhibits at the Mechanics Fair, is a gold medal to E. S. Hunt, of Weymouth, for his new life-saving apparatus—an honor which it richly deserves and proves that its merits are appreciated by men of standing in the country.

The funeral obsequies over the remains of the late Edward A. Joy, were held Saturday afternoon, at the residence of his father, on Middle street, and were conducted by Rev. H. W. Eldredge, singing being furnished by the Congregational choir, of which the deceased was a member.

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

Outside of considering applications for relief, either as in town or state accounts there were but few matters of business handled at the Monday meeting of the Selectmen.

The annual trial balance of the State account was received and for the first time in many years the balance was against the town. There is a long list of items on both sides and the gross indebtedness to the state is $29,108.39 with an offset of $24,303.25 leaving a balance $4,805.14.

Quite a little time was spent in an investigation of the recent accident by which Combination 1 of the fire department was put out of commission. Chief Pratt and Engineer Nadell were questioned to quite a length and various explanations made. Like a wrecked ship the machine was "off her course and struck a bad place" but why off her course was not made quite clear. The damaged apparatus is however in the hands of its builder and will be in commission again about the 1st of Jan. 1916 at an expense of $1,800.

There is much complaint by teamsters of the slippery condition of the state roads and the difficulty in hauling loads up steep grades or holding them back on down grades and the matter of sanding has been put up to the State Highway Commissioners with little encouragement for help from that source.

The Royal Order of Moose have been granted permission to hold dancing parties in their hall and the Weymouth Firemen's Relief association permit to hold its annual ball in Fogg's opera house, South Weymouth, Friday night, Feb. 4th, 1916.

Police Notes.

Headquarters received a warrant from Supt. Crowley of the Boston police for a man wanted in that city for larceny. The Chief gave Officer Fitzgerald the warrant and he soon served it on the person.

Officers Schofield and Baker, who have charge of the finger print system at headquarters, are being made acquainted with the inside workings of the system at police headquarters in Boston every Saturday.

Circulars were received at headquarters describing men wanted at various places, one from Penn. for a man wanted for false pretence, one from Boston for burglary, one from New York for grand larceny and one from Detroit for the theft of an automobile.

Officer Baker has found a dog which he would like to find an owner for.

Donovan—Delorey.

A very pretty wedding took place on Thursday morning, November 18th, when Miss Ida Florence Delorey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Delorey of 17 Putnam street and William Henry Donovan of Center street were united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed at nine o'clock by Rev. Cornelius J. Riordan at the Immaculate Conception church, East Weymouth. Miss Nellie Noonan, the church organist, played the wedding march.

J. Evans Slattery of Grove street was best man and Miss Velma J. Delorey of 17 Putnam street, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid.

The bride was gowned in a dress of white pussy willow taffeta with silk net and pearl trimmings and wore a veil. She carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. The bridesmaid's dress was of pink faille silk with lace trimmings and she wore a picture hat to match. She carried a bouquet of lavender chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride. The couple were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Simon Delorey, the bridesmaid and best man. A wedding breakfast was served.

After a short trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Donovan will be at home to their friends at 161 Broad street, Weymouth, after February 1, 1916.

Monday Club.

The Monday club held its regular meeting in Odd Fellows' opera house on November 18th and was largely attended.

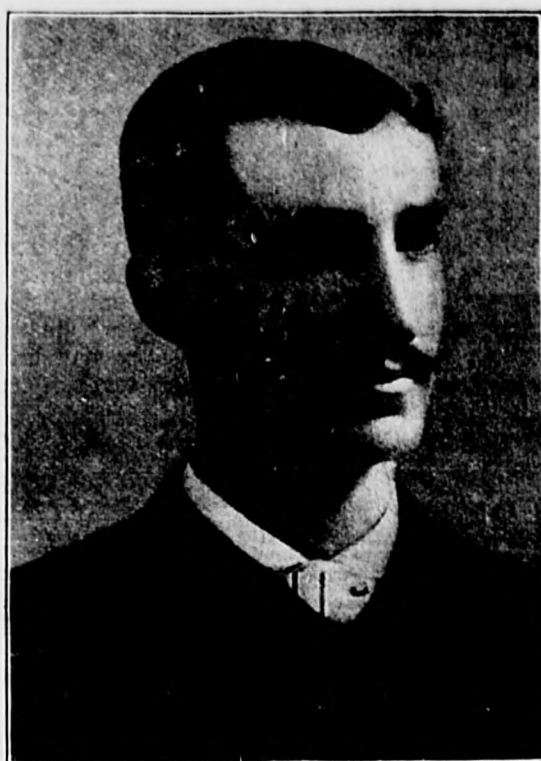

The report from the Federation meeting at Beverly was given by Miss Harriet Voorhees.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler Rice, who is a great favorite of the club, gave a very artistic interpretation of the four act historical play "Friend Hannah," by Paul Kester.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Sylvester Celebrate their Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

B. B. SYLVESTER

No. 841 Commercial street was the scene of a pleasant gathering, Wednesday evening, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Benjamin B. Sylvester to Miss Carrie Dyer, which event took place in the same house where the anniversary was celebrated, and for the intervening time has been their home.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. A. A. Kidder, then pastor of the Methodist church, and in which church both Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester are among the most active workers. Mr. Sylvester is also a strong temperance worker and for many years an active business man of East Weymouth.

The gathering was confined to the immediate families and a few intimate friends and in receiving they were assisted by their daughter, Miss Olive Sylvester.

A wedding lunch was served and the party was entertained with piano solos by Miss Hazel Hollis and vocal solos and choruses.

OLD COLONY CLUB DRAMATICS.

"Green Stockings" Presented Yesterday Afternoon Under Direction of Miss Annie Deane. Large Audience Out.

Before a very large audience the Old Colony Ladies' club presented its annual dramatic in Fogg's opera house South Weymouth, yesterday afternoon. "Green Stockings" a three act drama by A. E. W. Mason was given by an excellent cast of club members. Miss Annie Deane directed the performance, having conducted rehearsals for the same for several weeks.

The cast of characters follows:
Admiral Grice Mrs. George Conant
William Faraday Mrs. Wm. Wagner
Colonel Smith Miss Annie Deane
Robert Tarver Mrs. G. Frederic Bauer
Henry Steele Mrs. George Eck
James Raleigh Miss Ruth N. Tower
Martin Mrs. W. Carleton Barnes
Celia Faraday Miss Marion Tirrell

Mrs. William Barnard
Evelyn (Lady Trenchard)
Phyllis Mrs. Louis A. Cook, Jr.
Mrs. Chisolm Faraday (Aunt Ida)
Mrs. Walter Field

A candy sale was held during the afternoon in charge of Mrs. Frederic Kent.

FORUM AT BAPTIST CHURCH.

Homer B. Hulbert Speaks Before Large Gathering.

A forum meeting of unusual interest was held last Sunday evening in the First Baptist church at Lincoln square, under the auspices of the Community Service Union, with the Rev. Chester J. Underhill, the originator of the service, in charge. The auditorium was filled, when Homer B. Hulbert, A. M., F. R. S. G. S., who for 20 years was an adviser to the Korean Emperor, began his address on the "Korea, the Belgium of the East." The speaker told of the annexation of Korea by Japan, and of the effect the act had, upon the lives and welfare of the people of the former country. Sewall E. Payson sang in his usual taking manner, and Miss Emma J. Clapp gave an organ recital.

Monthly Supper Precedes Illustrated Lecture.

The Ladies' Social union of the Congregational church, East Weymouth, held its November supper and entertainment in the dining room and chapel of the church on Wednesday evening.

A supper was served at 6 o'clock to about 150 persons by the Golden Rule circle of King's Daughters.

Following the supper a very interesting illustrated lecture was given by Dr. J. H. Libby, who gave an account of his trip this summer to the San Diego exposition and return. The doctor had some fine views to illustrate his talk.

33D ANNUAL FAIR.

Village Cemetery Improvement Association Closes Successful Two Days Event.

The 33d annual fair of the Ladies' Cemetery Improvement Association of Weymouth and East Braintree, held last Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings proved to be one of the most successful in the 33 years of the association.

The two days' event opened Thursday afternoon in Bates' opera house, with all the usual tables and booths, all very prettily decorated and extremely well stocked for the occasion. The different tables were in charge of the following chairmen: fancy, Mrs. William E. Pray; domestic, Mrs. George E. Rowell; box, Miss Emma F. Thayer; candy, Mrs. John O. Bicknell; flowers and punch, Mrs. D. G. Doane; vegetable, James Wilson and ice cream, Mrs. William D. Aitken. The above ladies were ably assisted by other members of the association, while the entire affair was under the able direction of Miss S. Jane Clapp, honorary president; Mrs. A. E. French, president; Mrs. Edwin Senior, secretary and Mrs. Edward T. Jordan, treasurer.

Thursday afternoon a dress rehearsal of the operetta by the little folks entitled "Mother Goose Goslings" was presented under the direction of Mrs. H. B. Bachelder. Miss Mae Allen was pianist and Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer designed all the costumes for the gala event. The same operetta was presented on Thursday evening.

Among those who took part were the following: Mrs. Fouché, Barbara Senior, Velma Killman, Walter C. Guttererson, Kenneth Randall, Dorothy Wright, Thelma Gerald, Dorothy Spillane, Mary Neal, Benjamin Curran, Helen Watson, John E. Hunt, Helen Lang, Barbara Loud, Pauline Ahern, Marion Nash, Dorothy Dasha, Gladys Oliver, Albert Thayer, Theodore Alexander, Doris Alexander, Helen Neal, Eleanor Garvin, Hawthorne Price, Elliott Rollins, Raymond Hollis, Katherine Davenport, George Bicknell, Edna Gerald, Howard Stone, Henry Lavery, Theo. Smithers, George Pitts, George Leavery, Phillips Hunt, Donald Whittle, Austin Thayer, Benjamin Loud, Walter Guttererson, Francis Drown and William Donellson.

On Friday evening the drama "The Teaser" in three acts was presented by local talent, the cast being as follows:

Ellice Flemmyng, Mrs. Flemmyng's daughter, Bertha Hanson
Arnold Haye, a young journeyman, Leslie Sweet
Mrs. Marion Flemmyng, a widow, Lora F. Sweet
Dr. Thorpe, Homeopathic, a philosopher as well, Franklin P. Whitten Drusilla Todd, Dr. Thayer's best girl, Alice Smith
Urahiah Higgins, Rural Free Delivery, Randall Loud
Ebenezer Randall, a man of means, Edward D. Sweet

All the parts were very well enacted and Richard's orchestra added to the evening's program with several selections.

A feature of this year's fair was the second cook book placed on sale by the ladies of the association. The receipts were all contributed by the ladies and with the advertisements of many Weymouth and Braintree merchants, the second effort of the association is a worthy one indeed.

Village Study Club.

The Village Study club with a large attendance of members and guests met in the Fogg library building on Monday night, to pass judgement on the first issue of "The Villager." Prince H. Tirrell was editor in chief and with him were associated, Mrs. Joseph Grant, Sidney B. Cook, Harrison R. Cole, Mrs. Freeman Putney Jr. and Mrs. Prince H. Tirrell.

The cover design a reproduction of the inside of the Fogg library building, was by Arthur L. Vallin. Mrs. Joseph Grant contributed an article on "Eurhythmicology." "Names and Places in Weymouth," a story by Judge Louis Cook. Bates Torrey three poems, "Steeple Two," "Who Killed Our Neighbors Cat?" and "H. B. R." the latter being an illustrated appreciation of a former townsman. "Fathers Bomb" was a story contributed by Freeman Putney Jr. while a group of "Childs Poems" was sent in by Mrs. Henry Kohler. Mrs. Arthur Villin wrote an article entitled "A Heap of Fun" and "A Means to an End" was contributed by Miss Ruth Allen the author. "Selling Goods" was contributed by Marshall R. Abbott and from the letter box was taken a letter on "Belgium Before the War," by Mrs. Warren Simpson. An article entitled "Old Time Memories" was sent in by Clara R. Waterman.

The publication was voted an unequalled success and extra copies were ordered.

Featuring Fur in Matched Sets

Perhaps it is because we are learning the value of unity in apparel that hats and neckpieces to match have been produced by milliners in greater numbers than ever. Or it may be that the fur for fur everywhere on everything has brought it about. At all events, hats with neckpieces to match make a feature not to be overlooked in the season's styles.

Turban shapes are usually chosen to use in these sets. When wide-brimmed hats are used the fur appears in a band about the crown, or in balls set at close intervals about it. Fur balls, especially those of opossum skin, are among the prettiest of trimming novelties. These and other fur balls all set at the back, front and sides of small velvet toques. A single large ball of opossum makes a pretty trim for a brimmed street hat.

The neckpiece is a band of velvet edged with Krimmer, to which a plaiting of velvet is mounted. It fastens close up about the neck with a bow of satin ribbon at one side. A small rose and leaf nestles just back of the bow against the velvet.

A short cape of velvet bordered with fur and velvet ruff, trimmed in points and lined with satin, compose the other neckpiece. Pointed tabs of the velvet fall from the cape at the front.

It fastens under a small ornament having two hanging tassels of chenille.

Velvet cut in points appears about the turban brim and a fur band and tasseled ornament repeat the trimming features of the neckpiece.

Julia Bottomley

Ornament for Table.

Sew a coarse flannel over the bowl of a broken goblet. Wet the flannel and sprinkle as much flaxseed or canary seed as will stick. Set this in a glass dish of water in a warm room. As the water soaks into the flannel add more. In two weeks you will have a beautiful center ornament for the table.

How to Tint Lace.

It may not be generally known that the beautiful parchment shade of lace which has been kept for any length of time can be obtained accurately by carefully dipping in a mixture of fuller's earth, to which has been added a pinch of saffron; but very little of the latter must be used.

One-Piece Wash Dress.

A neat one-piece calico or gingham dress with short sleeves and low neck is the most practical for kitchen use, much better than loose "jackets," which flop about and are forever getting into things, and infinitely neater and more attractive than the old-fashioned "wrapper."

A Paradoxical River.

On the African shore, near the gulf of Aden and connecting the lake of Assal with the main ocean, may be found one of the most wonderful rivers in the world. This curiosity does not flow to but from the ocean toward inland. The surface of Lake Assal itself is nearly 700 feet below the mean tide, and it is fed by this paradoxical river, which is about twenty-two miles in length. It is highly probable that the whole basin which the lagoon partly fills was once an arm of the sea, which became separated therefrom by the dune of loose sand. The inflowing river has a limited volume, being fullest, of course, at high tide, and has filled the basin to such an extent that evaporation and supply exactly balance each other.

Three True Steels.

Iron and carbon steel, vanadium steel and tungsten steel are pointed out by Professor J. O. Arnold, British metallurgist, as the three true steels. The second kind is iron and carbon steel with 5 per cent of vanadium. The iron carbide having ceased to exist, and vanadium carbide being present, and the third kind is iron and carbon steel having 11.5 per cent of tungsten, the iron carbide having been expelled by the tungsten. Iron and carbon steel hardens at 730 degrees C., vanadium steel just below 1,450 degrees, its melting point, and tungsten steel at 850 degrees to 1,200 degrees.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Weather Effects.

The weather affects man in more ways, it appears, than many suspect. For example, it is believed that pressure variation due to fluctuating winds have peculiar pathological effects, that certain electrical conditions of the air induced by low atmospheric pressure have a pathological effect on nervous subjects and that solar radiation has peculiar effects which vary according to the season.

His Strong Point.

It is well to bear in mind that unblanched celery will withstand several degrees of frost without any bad effect, but blanched celery is very susceptible to frost.

Lets not begin to coddle our hens with the first whiff of frosty weather. That softens them and makes them tender for the real cold that is coming.

Seed corn picked in the dough stage will grow if properly cured, and enough seed should be saved for next year's planting as soon as the leaves have been killed by frost, even though it is in the soft dough stage.

The farmer has a low-lying piece of muck land that produces flags, cattails and rushes that produce no revenue, but if he is gifted with enterprise he drains out the marsh and has added valuable land to his holdings.

The simple truth is that by taking care of ourselves we may prolong life and keep clear of most of the accidents likely to occur on the farm. If all would do this the farm journals could dispense with their columns telling what to do when injured.

Every gardener should start water saving at once. If the newly plowed land is disked thoroughly the same day it is turned over there is less chance of the furrows drying out badly before the land is planted. Newly spaded land should be raked over the same day the soil is turned.

The selection of seed corn is one of the most important points that require attention at a particular time. Numerous investigations have shown that home grown seed corn will yield better than seed from some distant section of the country even when climatic conditions are not materially different.

The clover crop makes about half its growth during the last thirty days of the grazing period, so it can be more heavily grazed at that time than earlier. Care should be taken, however, not to leave it too short for the winter, as enough foliage should remain to hold the snow and insure a good early start in the spring.

A quart of bran mixed with a peck of cooked turnips will give better results than when the same proportions of bran or turnips are fed separately, for the reason that the turnips are composed mostly of water and the mixture is more complete as a food while the bran is better digested when fed with the bulky food.

Dig away the earth around the peach trees to the depth of one foot and look carefully for borers. Then swab the trunk a foot below and above ground with thick whitewash, returning the soil to the tree and banking up six inches or a foot above the level of the ground, leaving the tree in that condition until next spring.

In laying out a drainage system, the outlet is the first consideration. On rolling or hilly lands channels have usually been washed out, although they may need to be straightened and cleaned out. On low, level land it is usually necessary to dig open ditches, and they should be straight and deep, since curves check the flow of water, while in a deep ditch water generally flows more rapidly and less vegetation is likely to be present.

More amateurs are engaging in agriculture today than ever before. The back to the soil movement is at its zenith. Farming as a vocation lures city families by its promise of independence, comfort and safety. It is highly profitable now as compared to the condition twenty years ago, and without doubt people who are ordinarily capable can make the business pay. At the same time they have the assurance of a comfortable home in peaceful surroundings. The rural environment is making a strong appeal to many who are tired of the cities.

Trolley Car on Runners.

When the ground is covered with snow in at least one city in Norway a trackless trolley car hauls as a trailer a passenger car mounted on runners.

Imagination.

The man with little imagination is a mere automaton, doing as he sees others do, because he cannot imagine any other way to do. He has no marked individuality of his own, for he has no dreams to live up to. Imagination means individuality; for as we live in our dream lives, so we will live more or less in reality.

Two Pumpkin Pies

Thanksgiving Offering That Ended a Family Feud.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Abigail Lester set the last pie on the pantry shelf and sniffed delicately at the pleasant aroma.

There were five luscious, yellow and brown pumpkin pies with tender, flaky crust baked in square biscuit pans. Abigail Lester's mother always baked her pumpkin pies in square tins, and Abigail did the same thing when she was left alone in the old farmhouse. She used her mother's recipe, too, and somehow pumpkin pie never tasted just right unless it was baked "square."

"One for the minister, one for Lucinda Drake and one for Heppy Brewster," murmured Abigail. "That will leave two for me in case somebody happens to drop in."

Then, quite weary with the morning's work, she left her kitchen and went upstairs to take a nap.

From the old four post bed where she was lying Abigail could see the great barn which had been the center of the quarrel that had divided the family after her father's death. The two married daughters, Winnie and Emma, had each received her share before they married. Winnie Dacey had received the fine land adjoining the old homestead and the brown roof of her large comfortable home could be seen from all the south windows of Abigail's home.

The road turned just beyond Dacey's place, and on that plot of the triangular portion Emma Redgate and her husband had built their home. Abigail could see Emma's house quite plainly.
To Abigail, the unmarried one, had fallen the homestead with its smaller acreage. That was all very well. Every one was satisfied until it was discovered that John Lester had neglected to include in his will the great red barn and the land surrounding it.

The Daceys said it should have been left to them. It was situated conveniently close to Herman Dacey's hay fields, and Herman made a business of selling hay and grain. Jim Redgate said that there was no doubt that the big barn should belong to Emma because Emma had told her father it would save them the trouble of building a new one, the old one having burned to the ground, and John Lester had murmured, "Very true, Emma!"
That was all.

When it was discovered that Abigail believed that the barn should go with the homestead the Daceys and the

SEE DREW OFF THE NAPKIN AND DIS-PLAYED THE TOOTHsome PIE.

Redgates ceased quarreling with each other and turned their concentrated wrath upon Abigail, with the inevitable result that a bitterness arose among them.

For three years the Daceys and the Redgates had ignored Abigail Lester.
Their children were not allowed to come to see her, and Abigail, who had helped to rear them properly and loved them all dearly, had felt that the keen est blow of all. But she possessed her share of the Lester obstinacy and would not give in.

Abigail always felt these thoughts crowding closely upon her at anniversary seasons. Now she could not sleep, and, getting up, she drew the shade before the window that looked on the offending barn and dressed herself for the afternoon.

She wrapped up three of the pumpkin pies in snowy napkins and placed them in a broad market basket. When Bennie Brush and his brother came over to bring in her coal and wood she would get them to deliver the pies for her. The 10 cents she would give them would be joyfully received at this holiday time.

Benny Brush and his brother came whistling down the road with Abigail's basket between them. One pie was for Miss Lucinda Drake, one was for Miss Heppy Brewster down at the mill, and the third one was for the minister.

Along came Joe Finney with his shotgun.

"I'm going to shoot quail," he said patronizingly. "If you kids want to come along you can."

Benny looked at Bobby, and both looked at Abigail's basket. The 10 cents was in Benny's pocket. "We potter take these pies around. One's for the minister, and, gosh, I can't remember what to do with the others!"
he said in a scared tone.

"I can't either," whimpered Bobby.

"I want to go with Joe."

Benny looked at the Dacey house and beyond it the comfortable home of the Redgates. A look of relief passed over his freckled face. "I remember now," he said hopefully. "They're for her two sisters, Miss Dacey and Miss Redgate. Of course they are!"

"I thought they was all mad at each other," protested Bobby.

"Never you mind!" cried Benny as Joe Finney moved impatiently away.
"Wait a minute, Joe, and we'll go along, too, and if you ain't in too much of a hurry I'll run down to the minister's house, and when I come back I'll bring back ten lollipops."

"Now, Bob," said Benny breathlessly, "you take this here pie up to Miss Dacey and just say, 'Miss Lester's compliments,' and beat it. You understand, hey?"

"Yes," trembled Bobby.

"And take the other one to Red-gates' and say the same thing, and if you say anything more, why, you won't get any lollipops!"

"All right," said Bobby sullenly as he set forth with a pie in either hand, while Benny took the minister's pie and disappeared in the direction of the village. Joe Finney polished his gun barrel and whistled softly.

Mrs. Dacey was in the kitchen frying doughnuts when her oldest daughter burst into the room. Winnie was seventeen and a pretty, vivacious girl.
In both hands she carried a square object wrapped in a white napkin.

"Mother, what do you think?" she cried. "Aunt Abbie has sent you a pumpkin pie with her compliments! Look!"
She drew off the napkin and displayed the toothsome pie in its square tin.

A dull red suffused Mrs. Dacey's cheeks. The square pie looked so much like those her mother had made years ago when they were a large and happy family that the quick tears started to her eyes. This friendly overture on Abigail's part was unexpected.

"It's a beautiful pie," said Mrs. Dacey huskily. "I expect your Aunt Abbie made it by mother's old recipe."
"Um-m-m! It smells good!" sniffed Winnie; then she added rather wistfully: "I wish we were truly friends with Aunt Abbie. She must be very lonesome. And she always goes to us."

"Put it in the pantry," said Mrs.
Dacey sharply, "and go down to the store now and get that sugar if you're going to make candy tonight."

Winnie had barely left the house before the back door opened to admit a gust of frosty air and the shawled form of Emma Redgate.

She was a large, stout woman, and she sank breathlessly into the Boston rocker and threw back her shawl.
"Whatever do you think, Winnie?"
she panted.

Mrs. Dacey looked up sharply.
"You got a pie, too?" she asked.
"The land! Yes, I did. So she sent you one! I wonder why she did it, Winnie?"

"I don't know—except to show she's sorry about the trouble. Did you see the pie, Emma? It looked just like one of ma's."

"I know it," murmured the other woman. "It took me right back to old times."

"If any one had told me then that we'd quarrel with Abbie I would have laughed!" Mrs. Dacey lifted out a cru-ler on the end of a long fork and added it to the pile on the platter.

"The children pester me most to death about their Aunt Abbie," remarked
Mrs. Redgate with sudden candor.

"Seems 'f they set more store by what she used to do for them than anything I can do now. It's a sore point with them because I won't let them go there or take anything to eat from her. I say if the parents are not on good terms with her, the children can't be it stands to reason."

Mrs. Dacey was silent.

"I can't get over the pie," she said thoughtfully. "Emma, I feel this way:
If Abigail can forgive and forget the things we said to her three years ago and send us one of these pies I guess we can go over and thank her—what say?"

"You're right, Winnie," replied Emma eagerly. "Jim always said we made more out of it than we ought to.
Do—do you want to go now?"

"Wait till this evening after supper.
You slip away and come over here. I don't want any of the family to know about it just yet," said Mrs. Dacey.

That evening after tea Abigail Lester sat alone in her sitting room knitting a pair of bedroom slippers for Heppy Brewster, who was her most intimate friend.

The empty kitchen seemed to echo with the footsteps of children as they danced joyously about a smiling mother who was preparing Thanksgiving dainties. There was the smell of mince pies and roasted chestnuts and popcorn and apples from the great bowl on the sideboard. What would her mother have said if she had witnessed the dissension over the red barn?

Abigail's head drooped lower and lower until it rested on her arm. Slow tears forced their way between her closed lids.

A little while afterward two faces were pressed against the window that looked out on the porch. Then the door opened softly and admitted Emma Redgate and her sister. Each one carried something wrapped in a napkin.

Abigail's head was still bent on the table. She had not heard them enter.
Winnie Dacey hesitated a moment and then laid a toll hardened hand on her sister's head.

"We—we didn't knock, Abbie; we came right in," she said confusedly.

Abigail started up with a little cry.
She stared at the two women with incredulous eyes.

"You, Winnie? And you, Emma?"

"Yes, Abbie. We came to thank you for the pies and to bring something.
Emma's brought some of your favorite beach plum jam, and here's a plate of

ECHOED EMMA REDGATE.

cinnamon doughnuts. You remember ma always made cinnamon doughnuts for Thanksgiving."

"Yes—yes—I've been thinking of it all, and I'm so lonesome!" cried Abigail, giving way to tears.

Somehow the three sisters found their arms around one another.

After awhile they drew apart and sat down on the long hair cloth sofa.
Abigail was in the middle, and Winnie and Emma sat on either side with their arms around her.

"I've been sorry for a long time, Abbie," said Emma thoughtfully, "and the children have most broken their hearts over the trouble, but somehow that Lester spunk wouldn't let me speak first."

"Same here," said Mrs. Dacey briefly. "The hull thing is nonsense, girls.
And, just think, two square pumpkin pies just healed that quarrel!"

Abigail lifted her head and stared from one to the other. "You mentioned pies when you first came in," she said in a puzzled tone. "What do you mean?"

"Didn't you send me a square pie this afternoon with your compliments?"
demanded Mrs. Dacey.

echoed Emma Redgate.

Abigail's face reddened deeply.

"No," she said faintly. "I wish I had, but I didn't. I sent Benny Brush out with three pies—one for the minister, one for Lucinda Drake and other one for Heppy Brewster. The little lad must have forgotten the names and left 'em at your houses. Most likely, he thought if I was any kind of a sister I would be sending pies to you!"

Abigail sobbed brokenly.

The perplexed eyes of Mrs. Redgate met the puzzled glance of Winnie Da-cey. As by one accord their arms folded around Abigail and they drew her closely.

"I'm glad the mistake happened," said Mrs. Dacey practically. "I shan't give up my pie to anybody, Abbie! I prize it too highly."

"So do I—wild horses can't drag that square pie out of my pantry," threatened Emma Redgate. "We'll get together tomorrow and make some more pies for Lucinda and Heppy."

"I wonder who got the minister's pie!" laughed Mrs. Dacey, and Abigail and Emma joined her. With that little burst of merriment went the last icy barrier of the quarrel.

"There's just one place that's big enough to hold Thanksgiving dinner in tomorrow," said Mrs. Dacey. "There's all Emma's folks and all mine and the cousins from Beyond River, and Abigail!"

"Where's that?" asked Abigail, thinking of the dear nieces and nephews who would throng about her once more.

"Why the big barn, of course! The boys can get it ready in the morning and build a fire in the old stove there.
This will be a real Thanksgiving, girls, and I know ma and pa won't be far away from that feast! There won't be another Thanksgiving like ours!"

And it happened that the red barn which had been the cause of so much bitterness and many heartburnings witnessed the peace-making of the three sisters and their families.

As for Benny Brush and his little brother, they never could understand why Miss Abigail Lester never scolded them about the pumpkin pies nor the reason why she presented them with new sleds when the first snow came.

Dr. Richard C. Cabbot of Harvard is reported to have said that nine-tenths of modern physicians guess at the needs of their patients and prescribe accordingly but fails to tell which tenth Dr. Cabbot

The fellows who "rock the boat" are mostly drowned or gone out of the business but those who "didn't know it was loaded" are constantly coming to the front and we may soon look for "thin ice" to help along the "race suicide."

Thanksgiving is next Thursday and the week will be one day short for work. We shall observe the day according to the time-honored custom and ask all correspondents to get in their copy Tuesday and Wednesday as we shall be limited for time on Friday.

Booker T. Washington is no more and in his going out not only the colored race but the whole world has lost one of the greatest benefactors of mankind in his day and time. He was not only a success in his specially chosen field but an inspiration to workers in other fields of moral, social and educational uplift.

The sunshine and storm, the winter's cold and summer's heat of another year have come and gone and again we have arrived at the time honored custom of observing a day of thanksgiving and praise for the blessings and comforts we have received and enjoyed.

In many respects the manner of observing the day has materially changed from the custom of the fathers. In the olden days there were fewer families than today and members of the families then existing found it a comparatively easy task to have a grand home-coming and several generations would gather beneath the parental roof to feast and rejoice.

More wide-spread family relations and society conditions make the gatherings of the past an impossibility except in rare instances and yet we all live under the blessings of the same kind Providence which brought our fathers across the trackless deep and crowned their efforts for freedom with success.

It is but fitting then that regardless of party or creed we, as a people, observe the day appointed by the President of the United States and by the Governor of this Commonwealth as a day of thankfulness that no national calamity has overtaken us, that social events of the year have brought us together on a better basis than ever before in the history of the country.
We can be thankful that we have had a year without drought or famine and that "we have bread to spare."

—The Woman's Missionary Society held a meeting with Mrs. Edwin Murphy on Wednesday afternoon.

—Mrs. John B. Merrill and Mrs. F. C.
McDowell will entertain the Uwikana club, at the home of Mrs. Merrill, this (Friday) evening.

—On Monday, Mrs. Mary French received congratulations and post-cards from her many friends, it being her eighty-seventh birthday.

—Miss Olive Studley gave a party at her home, on Monday afternoon, to her Sunday school class. Games and the serving of refreshments were features of the afternoon's enjoyment.

—The subject at the meeting of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society on Sunday evening will be "The Way in Which God Wants To Be Thanked," and will be under the leadership of Miss Isabel Jones.

—A service under the auspices of the Old North church was given at the Town
Home on Sunday afternoon. Rev. Mr.
Edward J. Yeager gave a brief address.
The music was furnished by Mrs. F. C.
McDowell, organ; Edward Bates, cornet, and an anthem by the Wide Awakes was rendered.

—An entertainment for the benefit of the Y. P. S. C. E. connected with the Old North church, was given in the chapel of the church last Friday night. Mrs. Alice W. Merrill sang several solos, readings by Miss Ruth Sladen and piano solos by Miss Futh Kreeman made up the entertainment. Mrs. Frederick McDowell was the accompanist.

—A Thanksgiving Union Service of the

Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Pilgrim church vestry. The services will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Clark, and an address will be given by Rev. E. J.
Yeager.

—On Wednesday evening, Miss Ruth Sladen invited a few girls to her home in honor of her sixteenth birthday, but the sly young Misses thought they would give Miss Ruth a surprise party and go the night before. It was taken in good part by Miss Ruth, and a jolly evening was spent playing games. A delicious luncheon was served and the cutting of the birthday cake was a feature of the evening.
Miss Sladen was the recipient of many pretty and useful gifts.

—The people in Weymouth Heights
note with interest the work being done on the fountain situated at the corner of East and North streets. This fountain was a gift to Weymouth Heights by Mr.
Laban Pratt, a few years ago, and Mr.
Pratt is now having same remodelled.
When the work is finished, it will be one of the most attractively designed fountains to be found anywhere. On the top is carved a lion's head, from which will flow a stream of water. Both sides of the fountain will be utilized, for besides the drinking trough for horses there will be a bubbler fountain, and a trough for dogs.
The Weymouth Heights Village Improvement Society feel very grateful to Mr.
Pratt for his decided improvement.

South Weymouth, Mayor Curley of Boston was supposed to speak, but he was unable to be present. Mayor Curley was to have spoken on the subject of "Some Duties of a Modern Citizen."

David B. Shaw was the speaker who entertained the people present with a discussion on "Reforms at Deer Island." Rev.
Ora A. Price presided. Miss Helen F. Richards rendered several selections on the organ and violin selections were given by Miss Jeannette Shaw.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

—Wilson E. Beane and A. J. Sidelinger of North Weymouth have been appointed trustees of trust funds set apart under the will of the late James Torrey of this town, for the benefit of the Pilgrim Congregational church and society of North Weymouth, also for the benefit of the Sunday school connected with the church.

—Mrs. M. J. Clapp of Shaw street very pleasantly entertained the Tenophus club at her home last Tuesday evening.

grim church will hold their Home Missionary meeting next Sunday evening, November 21st. All members of the Endeavor and their friends are invited to bring offerings for the Thanksgiving dinners which will be given out by the Endeavor on Thanksgiving Day.

—Sunday, November 21st will be observed as Thanksgiving Sunday at the Pilgrim Congregational church. There will be an appropriate sermon and special music. As has been the custom for several years, fruit and vegetables will be received at this service to be distributed by members of the Christian Endeavor on Thanksgiving Day. There will also be a special service with music on Sunday evening.

—The ladies of the Pilgrim Circle held a Jitney supper and social in the church vestry last Wednesday. Supper was served from 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock followed by a musical entertainment and Miss Ethel Caine, reader.

—The second meeting of the teacher's training class was held in the vestry of the Universalist church last Wednesday evening under the direction of Mrs. Wil-lena B. Reed of Winthrop.

—At the meeting of the Universalist Men's club of North Weymouth next Monday night there will be a debate on the question, "Resolved that North Weymouth is not a good place to build a home in." Messrs. Torrey, Nesbit and Leighton have been appointed to present the affirmative side and Messrs. Sampson, Hilton and C. E. Stiles the negative. But all members are requested to come prepared to take part in the discussion.

W. R. C. Notes.

The next meeting of Reynolds W. R. C. will be held in G. A. R. Hall, Friday afternoon, November 26th, at 2:30 o'clock.

The Good of the Order committee will hold a quilting party Friday afternoon following Thanksgiving day at 2 o'clock, in G. A. R. hall. Members bring lunch and stay over to the evening meeting.

SPORTING NOTES.

Representative eleven of Milton and Quincy met in Milton last Friday in their annual conflict. Milton won 28 to 13, mostly on account of the playing of Reginald Nash of South Weymouth. His broken field running featured.

How many seats have you got for the big game to-morrow?

I see Representative Nash can bowl, as well as play baseball, football, basketball and politics. On the Norfolk club alleys, last Thursday night, he led his team with a three-string total of 536 pins, and incidentally his team, of which Sam Robinson is captain, defeated Team 6, Warren Philbrick captain, 2350 to 2342. Team 3 got 3 points and Team 6, 1 point.

Weymouth High came across in fine style against Belmont last Saturday. 7 to 0 is as good as 70 to 0.

The Yale bulldog showed its teeth last Saturday when the Princeton tiger appeared for lunch in the big bowl.

Several from this town are to attend the Harvard vs. Yale game in the stadium to-morrow. From all indications, Weymouth got its share of the precious pastebards for the big game.

Nearly time to get the basketball which has been gathering dirt and dust since last March.

Weymouth High, 7; Belmont, 0.
Weymouth High football team is fast getting into its stride, as the defeat of Belmont High indicates. In a hotly contested game at that town last Saturday, the Weymouth boys pinned defeat to the home team by the score of 7 to 0. The summary: Belmont High—Dailey, r; Higley, r t; Cate, r g; McKensie, c; McCarthy, l g; Levine, l t; Mahoney, l e; Hurley, q b; Malanson, r h b; Clark, l h b; Finn, f b. Weymouth High—Whittle, l e; Palmer, l t; McIntosh, l g; Sprague, c; Hayes, r g; Crehan, r t; Haviland, r e; Curtin, q b; Mauro, l h b; Rand, r h b; Zwicke, f b. Score, Weymouth, 7. Touchdown, Zwicker. Goal from touchdown, Curtin. Umpire, Husband. Referee, Armstrong. Lineman, McCrey. Time, 12 m. periods.

For Thursday, Nov. 24th.
Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him and bless his name.—Psalm c, 4.

Honesty in Man.
"What's your idea of an honest man?" "An honest man," replied Mr. Kimp, "is one who likes the same music in private that he says he likes when his wife is giving a musical evening."—Philadelphia Record.

MAKE EXERCISE PLAY.

To Get the Best Results It Must Be Thoroughly Enjoyed.

When you exercise, play. That is one of the points most strongly urged to the attention of the public in recently published public health reports.

No matter whether you are walking, gardening, exercising in a gymnasium or playing golf, keep your exercise free from the spirit of drudgery and make it all recreation. Make it as enjoyable as anything you may do throughout the entire day. If you don't much of the good that it might do you is lost. "The very best thing a man can do," says the report, "is to make a hobby of his exercise. No matter how poor the hobby, if it induces outdoor exercise it is perfectly justifiable."

The woman who is obliged to take her baby out for a two hours' airing every day is far more fortunate than she often realizes.

The only advice the report offers the man who is going to take up a hobby for the benefit of the resulting exercise is to choose one that permits of its being followed the year round rather than one that depends upon seasons of the year. For that reason the amateur gardener or chicken fancier is far more fortunate in his choice than the amateur geologist, botanist or ornithologist. The latter must wait on the seasons and must find favorable locations for indulging their hobbies, while the former have year round pastimes.

OUR MISNAMED RUINS.

The Mesa Verde Cliff Dwellings Are Really Complete Towns.

Many visitors to the prehistoric cliff dwellings of the Mesa Verde National park, in southwestern Colorado, says a government publication, are astonished to find that what is commonly described as a dwelling is not properly a dwelling at all, but a village or city.

The celebrated Cliff Palace is not a palace. Neither is Spruce Tree House a house, nor Balcony House a house. Each of these is a complete town which once, in the dim ages before the earliest Indian tradition, was an organized community, often of considerable size.

The arrangement of houses in a cliff dwelling of the size of Cliff Palace, for example, is characteristic and intimately associated with the distribution of the social divisions of the inhabitants. The population was composed of a number of units, possibly clans, each of which had its own social organization more or less distinct from others, a condition that appears in the arrangement of rooms. The rooms occupied by a clan were not necessarily connected, although generally neighboring rooms were distinguished from one another by their uses.

In a Maori Wooing House.

Among the Maoris sometimes in the whare matoro (the wooing house), a building in which the young of both sexes assembled for play, songs, dances, etc., there would be at stated times a meeting. When the fires burned low a girl would stand up in the dark and say: "I love So-and-so. I want him for my husband." If he coughed (sign of assent) or said "Yes!" it was well; if only dead silence she covered her head with her robe and was ashamed. This was not often, as she generally had managed to ascertain, either by her own inquiry or by sending a girl friend, if the proposal was acceptable. On the other hand, sometimes a mother would attend and say, "I want So-and-so for my son." If not acceptable there was generally mocking, and she was told to let the young people have their house (the wooing house) to themselves.

His Master Stroke.

"George Ferguson," said his wife, looking with crushing scorn at the gaudy rug he had bought at a special sale. "I wonder if ever in your life you knew a bargain when you saw it!"

The case was critical. Mr. Ferguson saw that something bold and decisive must be done, and his mind worked quickly.

"Why, yes, Laura," he said. "When I wanted a wife I picked out the nicest, sweetest little woman in the whole world, and I got the best bargain any man ever got. There, there pet!"—Chicago Tribune Sitting in Judgment.

The admonition "Judge not that ye be not judged" is valid only at those rare times when we are feeling humble and insignificant. On these rare occasions we find the attitude, "Who am I that I should pass judgment upon my fellow men?" But the normal attitude is, "Who are my fellow men that I should refrain from passing judgment upon them?"—Life.

Surprise All Around.

"Miss Gadders is full of conversational surprises."

"Just what do you mean by that?"

"You never know what she is going to say."

"Good heavens, man, she never knows that herself!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Problem.

Lecturer—Now, my dear friends, the first duty of a teacher is to inoculate his pupils with the love of learning. Timid Teacher—But, sir, suppose I wouldn't take?—Baltimore American.

The Head of the Family.

In Germany the father is the head of the family, in France the mother, in England the eldest son, in America the daughter.—Don C. Seitz.

Life is short. Let us not throw any of it away in useless resentment.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

People who are aware that they are in the right need never lose their temper.

Do without stimulants. Let fresh air and cold water be your stimulants.—Harriet Martineau.

SUPERIOR FIGS AND DATES.

Dates and figs are rich in nutriment and contain food enough to supply an excellent dessert for a light meal.

Fig Custard.—Wash a pound of figs and cover them with water to cook an hour, add the juice of a lemon, a few bits of peel, which may be removed after the figs are tender. Make cup custards, using four eggs, a half cupful of sugar and a quart of milk and a pinch of salt. Cook the custards and on top of each place two spoonfuls of the fig mixture, cover with a meringue or whipped cream and serve cold.

Chopped dates and figs, mixed with chopped nuts and a little cream to make it of spreading consistency is fine for sandwich filling. Dates on top of coffee cake, with raisins, makes a most dainty and wholesome breakfast dish.

Fig Loaf Cake.—Take two cupfuls of chopped figs, two cupfuls of sugar, a half cupful of butter, a cupful of milk, four cupfuls of flour, four eggs, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, mix as usual and bake in a loaf.

Date Pie.—Make a rich pastry shell and bake it. Fill with the following mixture: Wash a pound of dates, heat them (after removing the stones) in a quart of milk, when soft run through a sieve and add one egg well beaten, a pinch of salt, and pour into the baked shell. Cover with whipped cream and serve cold.

Date Macaroons.—Beat the whites of five eggs until stiff, add a half pound of powdered sugar, a half cupful each of chopped nuts, and a half cupful of grated cocoanut and a cupful of chopped dates. Beat until stiff enough to roll into balls. Bake one to be sure the oven is right.

Dates and figs added to a simple apple and celery salad add much of richness and flavor to it. Stuffed dates may be made with fondant for filling or cream cheese. Figs stewed in water and lemon juice with a little sugar make a most delicious sauce to serve on ice cream. In fact these fruits can hardly be out of place, they are so well liked.

"It's a Pleasure to Bake with a Magee Range"

ONE damper movement throws the entire heat through the special Magee Sheet Flues, and sends it around five sides of the oven. This means a hotter oven and saves your fuel.

Magee glass oven doors make it possible to see the condition of your roast or your baking without stooping or opening the oven door.

Magee Ranges are equipped with gas ovens and gas broilers, as well as open burners on top of the range.

PICTURESQUE CORNER OF MERAN

AMONG the many famous health and pleasure resorts smothered by the European war, one of the most attractive is Meran. A favored garden spot of earth, an ancient Roman outpost where legionaries stood guard against northern barbarians and where Caesars sought to regain their dissipated health, Meran has maintained through all its checkered history a high reputation as a pleasure and health garden, and as a resort for rank and fashion, says the bulletin of the National Geographic society. This picturesque Tyrolean city, banked around by lesser Alps, has been a favorite wintering place for wealthy Americans, a number of whom have purchased villas here and some of whom have become permanent residents. Considerably more than 10,000 guests sought Meran each year, many, nominally, for their health, but most for the beauties of climate and surroundings and for the light gayeties of the fall and winter season.

The counts of Tyrol, the noble family from which the region took its name, long made Meran their residence. The much decayed castle of Tyrol, the original seat of the family, overlooks the town, and the mountain shelves and cliffs through the neighborhood are crowned with many other ancient castles and fine chateaux.

Meran is the first town of the upper Adige valley. It is 42 miles southwest of Innsbruck and 20 miles northwest of Bozen on the Brenner line. The rugged Kuechelberg lies behind it and all the hills beside are covered with miles of arched vineyards. Delicious grapes and wine are the town's most famed products. A grape cure is one of the attractions of the place, while the climate draws many suffering from lung troubles. Normally, Meran's season begins in early fall and lasts through to the end of spring.

Italians Love Aquileia. Aquileia, one of the first towns captured by the Italians in their storm across the Austrian borders at the head of the Adriatic, stands foremost among the Austrian Italian-speaking possessions in the sentimental attachment of the patriotic sons of Italy. Situated six miles back from the Adriatic sea, at the edge of the lagoons, in the Austrian province of Goerz and Gradisca, it was once a great and flourishing seaport, at one time ranking as the second city of Italy. It was, in those days, one of the mightiest bulwarks of the Roman empire against the pressing hordes of outside barbarians, a city of "proud walls and wide bespoken splendor." As late as the end of the fourth century Ausonius placed it ninth on the list of the great cities of the earth.

Today Aquileia is a mean, poverty-marked, dwindling fishing village, with a few thousand inhabitants. The wonderful structures of its heyday have served for centuries as stone quarries, and nothing now remains of their fabulous splendor. Aquileia, regal city of the empire, and later great seaport and industrial city, has vanished, in all likelihood for good. There remains from its golden days merely a heterogeneous mass of relics, statues, mosaics, columns, friezes from its parks and buildings; lamps from its once famous factories, besides many homely survivals and nicknacks.

Grave of Past Achievement. Trieste, the great seaport of today, is about twenty-five miles distant to the southwest. All the marks of the prosperity and importance of Aquileia have fled to Trieste, in the east, and to Venice, in the west. The once busy harbor is choked with silt and drifting dunes, while rafts and fishing boats are almost the only craft that now thread the varying channels. The modern village, counting 2,300 people, is unhealthy on account of its rice fields and is neglected and forgotten.

Aquileia is a grave of past achievement and a much-weathered monument of the world of the Roman age. Its museum is rich in trophies of Roman times and its ancient cathedral and the remains of the patriarch's palace are its most eloquent concrete memories. Aquileia, as is much of the northern and western coast of the Adriatic, is a rich field for archeologists and antiquarians.

The city is said to have been colonized by the Romans as a frontier fortress against the Celts in 183 B. C. In 168 A. D. Marcus Aurelius made it one of the strongest fortified positions in the empire. During Hadrian's reign its population reached the 500,000 mark. Attila destroyed the city in 452 A. D., and it never recovered its greatness. Aquileia was great and strong only throughout its Roman history, when, during its prime, it ranked immediately after the Eternal city itself. Its fortunes were those of the Roman world, and modern Italy, looking back over the gulf of centuries, feels itself not only the descendant, but also the heir of Latin Rome.

Britain Needs Timber. The demand for timber in Great Britain is so great, owing to the war, that the export of this material from Newfoundland, which has been practically abandoned of late years, is now being revived. Until about ten years ago there was a substantial annual export of deal and sawn lumber, but about that time the possibilities of the island for pulp and paper-making were emphasized to such an extent that large enterprises along these lines were established in Newfoundland, with the result that a large quantity of logs that had previously been exported in the form of lumber are now utilized and manufactured into pulp and paper on the spot. Now, however, the war has brought about new conditions, and the increased price for lumber has stimulated a revival of the exporting trade, the various concerns throughout the island, which hitherto have been operating entirely for the local trade, having decided this summer to go into the export business on an extended scale, as the compensation, if the cargoes are got securely across the water, is very large.

No Use for Small Change. "The United States government could almost do away with coins smaller than a dime so far as the towns of the Northwest are concerned," remarked Col. George W. Drewry of Kentucky at the Raleigh, according to the Washington Post. Colonel Drewry spent several months in Montana and Idaho and has just come East. "The price is 'two bits' for most anything a man wants," continued Colonel Drewry. "If you want a shave it's two bits; or if you want a refreshing drink of some kind it's the same. The bootblacks will consent to shine your shoes a little cheaper, but they want 15 cents for polishing your 'kicks, and they appear to think that is too cheap."

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.
Rumors of the removal of Dr. K. H. Granger are erroneous; he is still at, and will remain at his office 92 Pleasant street.

The subscriptions to the clock fund at North Weymouth have reached nearly one hundred and fifty dollars. The repairs have been nearly completed.

The Old Colony club met for the first time in the Union church vestry. Although stormy, quite a number were present and enjoyed an afternoon of unusual excellence, under the direction of Miss Ella Clark.

When the engineer at the factory of Edwin Clapp put in an appearance Monday morning he found the factory in a sad plight with a flood of water on from the automatic sprinklers in the cutting room. The fire which started the sprinklers was out but of course the water had continued flowing and ran through into rooms below. The fire damage was light but the water damage was quite heavy.

THIRTY YEARS AGO.
A shooting contest will be held at the grounds of the South Weymouth Fish and Gun club Thanksgiving day. All events will be open, including a handicap sweepstakes.

Dr. Chase is showing the champion radish of the season; it is nineteen inches in length, seven and one-half inches in circumference and with the top attached weighs three pounds.

Those who sit down at heavily laden tables will enjoy their feast with ten-fold satisfaction if they have sent some of their plenty to those who otherwise would sit at their usual meagre board. There is truly more pleasure in giving than receiving.

Arthur M. Raymond has been honored with an encore at the Mechanics fair in Boston and is filling a second week's engagement this week which is an honor conferred on no other artist who has presided at the big organ.

The cold wave which struck yesterday demonstrated the necessity of the steamer being kept in some place where the temperature is above freezing point and it was accordingly removed from the stable of George Young where the fire apparatus has been kept for the last few months, to the engine house which is now nearly completed.

THIRTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO.
Another financier has been exhumed. He deems it "mighty risky business to put your money into the bank, a feller is likely to drop off any time."

At the annual meeting of the Mutual Library association, the following officers were chosen: secretary, L. A. Cook; directors, Josiah Reed, W. A. Shaw, Geo. A. Morse, L. A. Cook.

On Education. "Education," said Uncle Eben, "enables many a man to express himself in a way that prevents him from concealing his foolishness."

One Way to Look at It. We have often wondered how a young man who really and truly loves a girl can be so selfish as to ask her to marry him and leave her happy alone.—Exchange.

Good Humor at the Table. If you would thoroughly enjoy your food, be good humored. An angry man doesn't know whether he is eating boiled cabbage or stewed umbrellas.

THE PROPER COURSE.

Information of Priceless Value to Every Weymouth Citizen.

How to act in an emergency is knowledge of inestimable worth, and this is particularly true of the diseases and ills of the human body. If you suffer with kidney backache, urinary disorders, or any form of kidney trouble, the advice contained in the following statement should add a valuable asset to your store of knowledge. What could be more convincing proof of the efficiency of Doan's Kidney Pills than the statement of a nearby resident who has used them and publicly tells of the benefit derived?

John J. Higgins, 18 Canterbury street, East Weymouth, says: "Exposure to all kinds of weather tended to bring on trouble with my kidneys. My back got so bad that some days I couldn't sit or straighten up. Several headaches and dizzy spells caused me much suffering and often I felt weak and tired all over. Sometimes I was confined to bed for weeks at a time. The kidney secretions caused me great annoyance passing too frequently at night. They were highly colored, painful and contained sediment. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me so much benefit from the start that I kept on taking them and soon improved greatly."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Higgins had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Cottell—Cushing

A very pretty "Chrysanthemum" wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Clara A. Cushing, 588 Broad street when her daughter Doris Lucille Cushing, became the bride of Henry Charles Cottell son of Mrs. Mary B. Cottell of Newport, R. I.

The ceremony, the double ring service took place at 7 P. M. in the presence of relatives and was conducted by Rev. Edward Torrey Ford, D. D. of the First Congregational church, East Weymouth. George Herbert Cottell of Providence, R. I., a brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Pauline Kimball Hoyer of Holbrook, a cousin of the bride was bridesmaid.

The bride's dress was of Irish cluny over white messaline, her veil was caught in place with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a dress of yellow tulle with white tulle trimming and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The wedding march was the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. George Baker of Atlantic, a cousin of the bride. The ceremony was performed beneath a beautiful floral arch of white chrysanthemums and suspended therefrom was the symbol of good luck, the gilded horse shoe. The interior of the house was handsomely decorated with white and yellow chrysanthemums and mountain laurel.

Following the ceremony a reception was held from 8 until 10 o'clock. Assisting the couple in receiving were the bridesmaid, best man, Mrs. Clara A. Cushing, Mrs. Mary B. Cottell and the brides' brother, George D. Cushing of Brooklyn. The ushers were Emerson R. Dizer, John T. Dizer and Norman E. Dizer of East Weymouth and Warren F. Hoyer of Holbrook, all cousins of the bride.

During the reception refreshments were served by the Misses Ruth Hoyer of Holbrook, Lillian Hesse of North Weymouth and Helen J. Murray, Susan A. Humphrey, Mildred W. Newcomb and Florence M. Lincoln of East Weymouth, friends of the couple.

Guests were present from Newport, Providence, Brooklyn, N. Y., Brockton, Holbrook, Quincy, Hingham, Cohasset, Wollaston, Atlantic, Natick, Boston and the Weymouths.

After January 1st, 1916, Mr. and Mrs. Cottell will be at home to their friends at 588 Broad street.

PARKS AND PLAYGROUNDS.

Report of Committee of the Board of Trade.

Weymouth, Oct. 12, 1915.

Your Committee on Parks and Playgrounds begs to report as follows: The committee organized with Mr. Sheehy, chairman and Mr. Walsh, secretary.

In making our first report, we would call your attention to the progress made in our parks during the past year.

In Ward 1, we find that the Park Commissioners have had placed in Beal's Park pipefittings for nine swings, six of which have been in use for a part of the summer months, also pipe fittings for four teters, two being in use. Two plank seats have been added and a row of shrubbery set out. The park seems to be appreciated, and the new apparatus is the beginning of a playground which is a necessity in every community. We understand a bamboo slide is to be installed in the near future as well as the suitable apparatus.

We find that on the top of Great Hill Park, Ward 1, three plank seats have been set up, three double sign boards telling that it is Great Hill Park erected and a number of young trees given by this organization set out.

We find that Mr. Bean, Park Commissioner of Ward 1, has given a great deal of time in seeing that the shrubbery, flowers, walks and grass have been kept in first-class shape in Beal's Park, and that he spent much time in visiting Boston's playgrounds in getting ideas for fitting out the playground.

We feel that in further developing Great Hill Park, situated as it is in such a conspicuous spot overlooking Quincy Bay, that we should have the help of the state. Being used more by summer people and other transients, it should be put in more attractive condition than the town is now in condition to do.

We find that in Ward 3, Webb Park, known as the "Meadow" for years, and used only for cow pasture, has been transformed during the past few months into a spot of rest and recreation. The so called "Meadow" has been made into a fairly good ball-field with a suitable backdrop. One section of the 254,000 square feet of park has been turned into a playground by the installing of three fifteen-foot swings, three twelve-foot swings, two teter boards, two horizontal bars and parallel bars. In the highest section of the park on a ledge, has been built a large stone and cement band stand seventy feet in circumference, near which has been placed a good-sized flag staff and about a dozen plank seats have been set up in shady spots. Thousands of people have visited and used this park during the summer, most of whom had little realized that such a beautiful spot existed in Weymouth.

We find that the Park Commissioners have spent about $350 on this park and through donations of apparatus and labor without compensation, being the result of a general awakening and co-operative spirit existing in the community, the outfit is really worth twice the money spent. The people of Ward 3 have backed up their Park Commissioner and we feel that it is the duty of this organization to give their support in the further developing of this park because it belongs to us and our children as citizens of Weymouth and was given to us to be used by all the people all the time. Where Wards 2, 4 and 5 have no parks or playgrounds we feel that the movement in developing such in the other Wards will no doubt lead up to the presenting to the town by public spirited citizens, sites of land suitable for such purposes. We feel that the children of every community are entitled to up-to-date playgrounds which we know is one of the best means of giving them health and strength which they will need in good quantities as they in turn take up the reins of government in our town.

Public bathing places are another great necessity for we find that during the warm season hundreds of our citizens bath in Fore River and along our shore in Quincy Bay and that there is not a public bath house on our water front where any of our 13,000 people can dress for bathing.

We find that it is customary for our people to don their bathing costumes in their homes and walk, some of them, long distances for their swim, then after trespassing on private land to get to the water, parade through the streets in their wet garments.

This seems rather a strange condition for a town of our size, therefore we recommend that this organization use its influence in remedying this condition and after thorough investigation and the obtaining of bona-fide purchase figures, insert in the next annual town warrant, one or more articles calling for the raising and appropriating of specified amounts of money for the purpose of buying or leasing of land and the building of public bath houses on the same and to include enough to pay for proper attendants during the time the bath houses are open.

We feel that if there are any tracts of land in town suitable for future parks and play grounds where none now exists that now is the time to purchase them. Don't wait until valuations have doubled. Buy now and plan now for the future.

CELEBRATE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNIVERSARY.

George C. King Chapter, Epworth League, Entertains Many Guests.

Last Thursday, in the chapel of the Methodist church, East Weymouth, the George C. King Chapter, Epworth League, celebrated the twenty-sixth anniversary of its organization. Delegations were present from the Epworth Leagues of Hingham, Cohasset, Rockland, Braintree and Hull, and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church attended in a body as special guests as did the Young People's Society of Faith Mission.

The committee in charge were Miss Abbie M. Maynard, Miss Mary J. Marden, Miss Una Carlton, Miss Olive D. Sylvester and Franklin M. Pratt.

The evening's entertainment consisted of songs and tableaux.

Following the entertainment, which was much enjoyed by all, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Mrs. Mary Tirrell Richards, Obituary.

Mrs. Mary Tirrell Richards, widow of the late Augustus J. Richards, passed away at her home, 25 Commercial street on the 19th inst.

Mrs. Richards was a daughter of Joseph and Susan (Adlington) Clapp and was born Nov. 25, 1838 in what is known as the Adoram Clapp house on Front street. She was educated in the public schools of this town and later taught for some years in the Tufts school.

On Nov. 6th, 1861 she was married to Augustus J. Richards, who for many years was engaged in the coal, wood and grain business in Weymouth and Quincy. He died July 16, 1906.

Their children, all born in Weymouth, were Henry A. and George J., both deceased, and Susan C., wife of Albert P. Worthen; Louise W., wife of Charles F. Bacon of Providence, R. I. and Annie E. Richards. The three daughters and six grandchildren survive her. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Charles W. Shippie of Boston and Mrs. Fred O. Sterling of Weymouth.

In 1882 Mrs. Richards joined the Union Congregational church of Braintree and Weymouth and until impaired health about a year ago prevented, was a faithful and active member among its workers. The Monday Club and Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R. also had in her an active member and ardent supporter, but while devoted to those several organizations she was not unmindful of social affairs around her and took her part promoting those events which were for the good of society.

Churches, clubs and society life were not however the real life of Mrs. Richards. Her real life may be summed up briefly. She was a devoted wife and mother finding her greatest happiness in her home and family circle.

Funeral services were held at her late residence Sunday afternoon, Rev. Albert P. Watson officiating. Mrs. Helen Allen Hunt sang "Lead Kindly Light," "Rock of Ages" "Nearer My God to Thee." Edward W. Hunt, Arthur E. Pratt, Clarence P. Whitte and Walter L. Bates acted as bearers. Floral tributes were many and beautiful.

She was laid at rest beside her husband, who had preceded her by nine years and for whom she never ceased to mourn, in the Richards' lot in the North Weymouth cemetery.

Mrs. Martha J. Eades, Dead.

Mrs. Martha J. Eades died at her home in Attleboro on Saturday, the 20th, aged 66 years.

Though born in Wolcott, Vt., Mrs. Eades, with her parents, Mrs. and Mr. E. G. Andrews and other members of the family was for many years a resident of East Weymouth and she has been a not infrequent visitor to her sister, Mrs. Nelson W. Gardner and other friends of her early home.

Funeral services were held at her late home in Attleboro on Tuesday and were conducted by Rev. R. S. Moore of that place. The remains were brought to Fairmount cemetery in East Weymouth on Tuesday where ritual and burial services were performed by the Daughters of Veterans assisted by members of Women's Relief Corps No. 102.

This seems rather a strange condition for a town of our size, therefore we recommend that this organization use its influence in remedying this condition and after thorough investigation and the obtaining of bona-fide purchase figures, insert in the next annual town warrant, one or more articles calling for the raising and appropriating of specified amounts of money for the purpose of buying or leasing of land and the building of public bath houses on the same and to include enough to pay for proper attendants during the time the bath houses are open.

We feel that if there are any tracts of land in town suitable for future parks and play grounds where none now exists that now is the time to purchase them. Don't wait until valuations have doubled. Buy now and plan now for the future.

TOWN BUSINESS.

Selectmen's Business and Other Departments of Work and Expenditures.

Early in the month the Selectmen received a petition from Edward H. Kavanaugh and others to lay out and accept Fore River road at North Weymouth as a town way. The selectmen viewed the situation but there now comes a remonstrance from Henry C. Alvord and others against the proposed lay out and a hearing on the same at the selectmen's office on Monday Dec. 6th.

The Selectmen are in receipt of an amendment to the order of the County commissioners Aug. 10 upon relocation of Washington street substituting for $5,175 as the amount which the county will contribute $5,705 this sum being on account of increased cost in culverts.

One of the most expeditious and to all appearances, successful piece of road building the town has seen in many a day, is that just being completed, the much needed rebuilding of Broad street from Hillcrest road to Putnam street.

Superintendent Maynard and Div. Supt. Holmes have kept the road machinery in motion. What is now an elegant stone road, but two weeks ago was a stone wall in the field.

The Worcester, Mass., Chamber of Commerce has made arrangements for a road meeting in that city on December 14, 15, 16 and 17, and invites the Selectmen to attend, as experts in every aspect of road building will address the several gatherings and modern road building will be discussed.

Police Notes.

The police arrested a man Sunday for assault, and in court Monday he was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $5.

North Weymouth police arrested a man for vagrancy Saturday, and in court Monday he was sentenced to the State farm at Bridgewater.

Milk inspectors have been busy in town lately, and one out-of-town dealer was summoned to appear in court Saturday for violating the milk laws, was found guilty and paid the cost of court.

A circular, describing a man that had escaped from the Mass. Reformatory, was received at headquarters during the week, and Supt. Crowley of the Boston police sent a circular describing a person wanted in Boston for forgery.

Mrs. Eliza A. Pray, Dead.

Mrs. Eliza A. Pray died Thursday at her home on Washington street, aged 83. She was born in Cohasset, and was a daughter of Daniel Hudson. Sixty years ago she was married in that town to Thomas W. Pray, and with the exception of one year, has lived in this town since. Her husband died a year ago. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Laura Whitton, and four sons, James A., William E. and Herbert F. Pray of this town and Thomas Pray of Sacramento, Cal.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon and was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Chester J. Underhill, pastor of the First Baptist church. The bearers were three sons, James A., William E. and Herbert F. Pray and three grandsons, Franklin P. Whitton and Lawrence and Ellwood Pray. Burial was in the family lot at Village cemetery.

Fare Increase Hearings Postponed.

The Public Service Commission announced last week a postponement of the hearings on the petition of the Bay State Street Railway Company to increase its fare and modify its fare zones and transfer privileges, to February 1st. This action was taken in order to give opportunity to the remonstrants to digest the very comprehensive testimony submitted by the Company.

Before the 1st of February, there will be announced a plan whereby the hearings may be expedited. The Commission will prepare a schedule dividing the entire Bay State Company's territory into districts and establishing days when each district will be considered.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

To make farming successful, the farmer must know his business and attend to it.

Spring work should begin in the fall with any farmer who pretends to be energetic. Next to plowing, hauling manure now helps as much as anything to lessen the spring rush.

Breeding stock needs warm, comfortable quarters for winter, where they may make good use of a small amount of feed and have sufficient vitality to develop strong healthy animals or litters of pigs.

Haul out and pile the summer manure in convenient places for spring use, such as is intended for top-dressing, and cover well with muck or loam. Green manures, if plowed under, will be in their appropriate place.

Overproduction of poultry and eggs is a possibility, but that such has at any time occurred is doubtful. The fear that the market may be overstocked has deterred some from venturing largely in poultry, but such fears have never been realized.

Corn and wheat make the ideal ration—old corn being much better for the purpose than new. The latter is apt to cause looseness of the bowels. In the absence of corn, feterita, maize or Kaffr makes a good substitute.

An automobile salesman finds that the surest recorder of the financial situation in the country is the briskness of the sale of automobiles. He sold in the vicinity of Quincy, Ill., 100 cars of a $750 make, and just half of them went to farmers.

The plowed land, after being subjected to the frosts of winter, will readily disintegrate and crumble down in fine particles when harrowed in spring, yielding a mellow seed-bed and facilitating the business of planting and the first hoeing.

One of the most common causes of disease of fowls found in back-yard poultry plants is overfeeding. This will invariably cause such troubles as excessive fat, indigestion, liver disorders, and leaves the fowls in such condition as to invite the ravages of other diseases, such as colds and roup, bowel complaints, etc.

The careful farmer has long since placed his implements under cover, but the man who has been "too busy to bring them in" will soon forget them entirely and they will be permitted to remain out of doors all winter to get a beautiful weathered appearance, not to say a coat of rust on all metal parts.

The object of mulching strawberries in the fall is to prevent winter-killing. Winter-killing is usually caused by the plants dying out too much during the winter months, or by alternate freezing and thawing.

The best mulch material to use is clean straw; this is placed on the plants 4 to 6 inches deep after the ground has been frozen.

The basement is often the best place on the farm for storing vegetables. It must be properly built and the temperature, moisture and ventilation conditions kept right if the best results are to be obtained. If it is too warm the vegetables will dry and shrivel, and if the ventilation is poor, drops of water will form and the vegetables will be more likely to decay.

Any place that has a dry atmosphere and an even temperature above freezing is good for storing seed corn. Among the best is a well ventilated attic, furnace room or vacant room in the house. Whichever place is selected, it must be fairly warm and well ventilated until the moisture is out of the grain and cob. Do not store seed corn in corncribs, barns in which live stock are kept or any place where the air is damp.

Nearly every successful manufacturing industry has efficiency as its ideal. Most factories have a system for checking up the work of the laborers, and the superintendent can easily tell which workers he will keep. Efficiency is as important in the poultry industry. The poultryman should have a system by which he can weed out the loafers from the hard workers of his flock.

Every pound a cow loses in flesh below good living conditions must be replaced by feed later, or it will be taken with interest. At times and with certain cows, it is possible to overfeed. If a cow is gaining in flesh rapidly, the quantity of feed should be reduced, unless she needs to gain. Unless she is fat, it is a mistake to cut a dry cow down to the minimum. If she has been bred as she should have been, the calf is maturing rapidly at this time that that cow should build up for the next year's work.

Afternoon Gown of Three Fabrics

An exquisite afternoon gown combining crepe, Georgette, taffeta and chiffon, all in the color known as wistaria, might be just as pretty developed in others of the fashionable colors. But it could not be prettier. In a season when one is almost bewildered by the diversity of style here is a gown to swear by. It is excellent in lines and composition and it is adorably refined.

The moderately wide skirt is laid in plaits about the waist at the sides and back, with the front left plain. The plaits are not stitched down, except at the waist line, where the skirt is joined to a plain blouse of chiffon. A very wide border of taffeta, finished with a three-inch hem, is set on at the bottom. Above this, at an interval of three inches, a second band of taffeta appears. It is about four inches wide and finished with a narrow machine-stitched hem at each edge.

The sleeves of chiffon are cut full at the top and narrowed from the elbow down. They are long and close fitting about the wrist, terminating in a small shaped cuff piped at the end with the taffeta. A narrow taffeta band combines them at the wrist, and they wrinkle along the arm in a way that is very soft and pleasing to the eye.

The collar is a band of taffeta embellished with a simple pattern in embroidery. This embroidery reappears on the over-bodice of taffeta at the waist line.

The over-bodice is a seamless model which fastens at the back, where it narrows to a wide girdle with ends that make soft, hanging loops. Its edges are finished with a narrow piping of the taffeta.

No gown could present more useful features to the needlewoman who is considering the remodeling of a last year's dress. Narrow skatings may be cut up into borders and bandings to use on the crepe or satin or light wool fabric for this year's skirt. And from last year's bodice, by one of the several jumper patterns to be had of pattern companies, an over-bodice for this year's gown may be made.

Inevitable Difference.
"My husband's ideas and mine are so different," sighed the young woman. "Well," replied her mother, thoughtfully, "the ideas of men and women are bound to differ. A woman can't see the sense in a box of cigars that nobody can wear, and a man has no respect for a new hat that you can't smoke."

The KITCHEN CABINET

The great altars are in quiet places, so Heaven stands best revealed in quiet humble lives. There is no place too small, too much hidden, for one to show elevation of spirit and glory of life.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

The simple curled bacon seems to be somewhat of a puzzle to many cooks. To prepare it first have it cut very thin; the butcher will do this on the dried-beef cutter. Then place it on ice to chill. Have a heavy iron frying pan very hot and stir constantly while cooking. Tip the pan while it is cooking, so that it may not stew in its own grease. Bacon should always be served dry and crisp enough to eat from the fingers.

Broiled Ham.—Cut thin slices from ham and cover with sour milk and let stand over night. In the morning rinse well and broil over coals or in a hot pan. In either case the cooking should be done quickly and the ham browned.

Fried Chicken With Olive Sauce.—Cut up well-dressed chicken, dip in seasoned flour and brown in butter, then cook slowly until thoroughly done. Serve with olive sauce.

Olive Sauce.—Brown two tablespoonfuls each of onion and carrot in a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and brown. Stir in a cupful of stock, that from beef extract will do if no other is at hand, and cook until smooth. Add one dozen stuffed olives and let stand until the olives are well heated through.

Planked Whitefish.—Heat and oil a plank made for this purpose; oak or maple make suitable boards. Spread upon this board skin-side down a whitefish, cleaned and split down the under side; brush over with butter or oil, and set in the dripping pan under the gas; after cooking a few minutes remove to the floor of the oven to finish cooking. Cook about twenty-five minutes, basting often. Set the fish on the plank upon a platter, spread with butter that has been mixed with lemon juice in the proportion of three tablespoonfuls of butter to one of lemon juice, season with salt and pepper and serve piping hot. Garnish the edge of the plank with mashed potato, put through a pastry bag and tube. Parsley and lemon is used to finish the decoration.

With a shortage of more than 12,000, 000 bushels of potatoes in the New England states for the season just closed and less than half a crop of beans it looks as though people would be compelled to hunt up a substitute for these two staple articles of food.

Community Service Union Hold Forum

A Sunday night Forum service, under the auspices of the Community Service Union connected with the Baptist church of Weymouth, was held and largely attended last Sunday night. Rev. Chester J. Underhill, pastor of the church, presided.

"Famous Hymns and How to Sing Them" was the subject that Miss Rosabelle Temple delivered an address on, and the speaker held the closest attention of her audience to the close.

Old-time songs, and hymns were sung by the congregation, led by a chorus of 30 voices. Mrs. Charlotte Goodby and Miss Madeline Gale sang solos and duets, and Miss Emma L. Clapp gave organ selections during the evening.

Following Are a Few of the Items
Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

FORTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.

Thanksgiving was kept in a very orderly manner by our residents and the religious services were tolerably well attended. The venerable Father Perkins delivered a discourse appropriate to the occasion at the Union church.

Phoenix division improved the evening before Thanksgiving with a social gathering of members and friends, the festivities consisting of speaking and singing and the discussion of a nice collation provided by the ladies.

The Weymouth Rifle club offered a number of silver prizes for the best rifle shooting, the contest being on the grounds of Asa Hunt on Front street. The first prize, a gold lined goblet, was won by Benj. L. Torrey, the second a butter cooler to James H. Clapp, the third a castor, by Mr. Cram. The number in attendance was large, the shooting being done mostly by veterans.

NINETEEN YEARS AGO.

The first Hingham car to run over the tracks of the Weymouth & Braintree road was run last Monday evening, the car going to South Weymouth.

Miss Annie F. Loud received a large and handsome medal from the government for music sent by her to the World's Fair at Chicago. The prize was for music by American composers.

The weather yesterday was warm, damp and depressing, but it did not prevent a vigorous attack and a tremendous victory over Mr. Turkey and his minions. The slaughter was tremendous and bones were everywhere.

Yesterday Capt. A. J. Garey of East Weymouth was engaged in the active duties of life and this morning all that was mortal of him is resting at his home on Randall avenue as the result of heart disease.

The gain in volume of business continues entirely without precedent. More than 300 establishments have started work since the election, which were idle, and at least 300 have increased working force, making 600 concerns which are known to have added largely to the number of hands at work and these are only part of the whole number.

SEVENTEEN-YEARS AGO.

In the death of Stephen Cain which took place at his home on Broad street in East Weymouth last Sunday one of the oldest and best known citizens has passed away and a long business career is ended.

The home of Sidney W. Raymond on School street in East Weymouth was the scene of a pleasant gathering Wednesday night, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Raymond's daughter Lucy A. to George D. Bagley of Weymouth.

M. C. Dizer & Co. continued the time honored custom of distributing turkeys among their employes this week and on Tuesday about two tons of America's pet bird found their way to the several homes of the people employed in their factories.

The petition of the Holbrook & Weymouth Street Railway company to construct tracks over Columbian, Forest and Randolph streets took place at the Engine house Saturday. There was no opposition to the petition and the selectmen will probably grant the same.

English Superstition.

It is a favorite superstition in England that the bacon of swine killed during the waning of the moon will waste away in the process of curing or cooking much more than bacon of hogs killed while the moon is growing. This superstition is akin to that which impresses upon farmers the necessity of planting root crops "in the dark of the moon."

LOVELL'S CORNER

—Rev. Edward C. Bass, financial agent for the conference claimants spoke at the Porter church Sunday evening.

—Julian Rea who is attending the Massachusetts Agricultural college at Amherst is at home for the holidays.

—Mr. and Mrs. William Davidson are receiving congratulations on the birth of a little daughter.

—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chapman and children and Mrs. Catherine Rea of West Bridgewater and Mr. and Mrs. George Hunt of South Weymouth spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rea.

People's Forum In South Weymouth.

Hon. Benjamin L. Young speaks at the People's Forum at Union church, Sunday night. His subject is "Prison Reform." Mr. Young was a member of the Mass. Prison Parole Board for two years. He has first hand knowledge of facts. In this lecture he shows how our present methods of dealing with criminals and defectives tend, not only to perpetuate the criminal and defective classes but to hatch out a new tribe every year. After giving a resume of present conditions, Mr. Young outlines what he believes to be the only rational and humane system of classification reform and correction which the state should adopt.

Mr. Young will discuss this problem at the People's Forum, Sunday night. Everyone is welcome to come and hear it.

Out of the Mouths of Babies.

Little Edith had been to a picnic, and a sleeper miss was never put to bed. As her mother finished undressing her she said: "Mamma, I said my prayers at supper to save time."

LIVING HIGH IN THE AIR.

Quito, In Ecuador, With Winter Above and Summer Below It.

Quito, in Ecuador, lifted nearly two miles into thin air, has always boasted its "perpetual spring," but in sooth it would be just as fair to call its climate "perpetual autumn." With a temperature that hovers about 60 degrees F. in the shade, the Quitoan passes his life in early April or late October.

He escapes the winter, to be sure, but misses the vernal miracle that redeems the higher latitude. But, whether he feels chilled or baked, he can always turn his eye toward comfort.

Out across the plain, about three miles to the north, the road drops 3,000 feet through a stupendous ravine, and from the high places of Quito one can peer down into a semitropical valley, its coffee trees and cane fields dancing in the heat waves.

On the other hand, when the overhead sun scorches there are a score of snow peaks to refresh the eye. As you study through a fieldglass the huge drifts and wild snowstorms on Antisana, which looks out over the rank forests of the "Oriente," you realize that it is easier and safer to get from where you are to Greenland than to reach those polar solitudes only a dozen miles away.

Groves of eucalyptus in the environs of Quito agreeably relieve the majesty of the scenery, and it is said that this province has a third of a million of these trees. President Moreno introduced them from Australia half a century ago, and it was a saying among even the enemies of Moreno that on the day of judgment he will escape the penalty of his misdeeds with the pen. "I gave Ecuador the eucalyptus," New York Telegram.

PUZZLED THE JAPANESE.

The Tumult a White Woman's Pair of Black Gloves Caused.

Japanese women never wear gloves. Thousands upon thousands of Nippon natives have never seen a pair of gloves. One day an American girl and I were walking through a small village some distance from Tokyo we were at a loss to understand why such a large crowd gathered around us on the street.

In a small town an American always gathers a crowd, but this crowd was particularly thick and excited, and when the Japanese do any looking they want to do it up close. The natives kept looking at my partner, pointing and jabbering away, wildly excited. The crowd kept getting tighter and tighter, while with our hands on our noses we kept trying to push out. They kept pointing at her hands, then at her face, and not until one of them reached over and felt of her hands did we understand what was the matter.

The girl with me had on a pair of black gloves with the ends under her sleeves, so that the excited villagers were trying to solve the mystery of how a person could have black hands and a white face. When she drew off her gloves, revealing hands the same color as her face, they disappointedly widened enough to let us through.

No doubt if she had not removed her gloves the legend of the woman with the black hands and the white face that once visited the town would have been landed down for years.—Homer Croy in Leslie's Weekly.

Form of Divorce in Old Rome.

In the earlier period of the Roman republic divorces were quite unknown and were rare right up to the time of the Sullan wars. In the old days the husband and wife who wished to separate appeared for the last time before the common hearth, a priest and priestess being present. As on the day of marriage, a cake of wheaten flour was presented to the husband and wife, but instead of sharing it between them they rejected it. Then, instead of prayers, they pronounced formulas of a strange, severe, spiteful character, by which the wife renounced the worship and gods of the husband. From that moment the religious bond was broken, and the community of worship having ceased to exist, the marriage without further ado was forever dissolved.

Puzzled.

A little girl has a new baby sister, and she has been somewhat puzzled as to the exact status of the new arrival in the family. She had willingly given up her bed, but something still seemed to trouble her greatly. One day she was found surveying the dining room just at mealtime. She looked at her own high chair, then inquired suspiciously of her father, "Where is she going to eat, daddie?"—Indianaapolis News.

Conciliatory.

Head Walter (dignified and pompous)—Have you ordered, sir? Despairing Patron—Yes, I ordered a porterhouse steak half an hour ago, and I wish to apologize for my rudeness. With your permission I will withdraw it as an order and renew it as a suggestion.—Chicago Tribune.

Unnecessary Knowledge.

Aunt Sarah (a splinter)—Now, dear, if you would only watch me closely you might learn how to crochet. Little Bessie—Oh, I'm goin' to get married when I grow up!—Pittsburgh Press.

Coca Leaves.

Coca, from the leaves of which cocaine is produced, was known among the Incas as the "divine plant" long before the discovery of America.

Union Church Notes.

Another of the big subjects discussed in the sermon Sunday morning, Nov. 28. The subject is "What Does the Atonement Mean?" What do Christ's life and death mean to men and women of today? Do they have any practical meaning to the average man, and what? Are these words any more than pious phrases to be passed easily over pious lips, but conveying vagueness to the average man? The sermon is not dogmatic. It aims simply to be suggestive and thoughtful. The thought seeker for truth and the worshipful soul are equally welcome.

In connection with the morning service the minister will read the three best stories about Thanksgiving handed in by children under 10, 13 and 16 respectively, and a prize will be given to the best of the three. Children who compete should hand in their papers with names and ages written on them, to Mr. Price by Friday night or very early Saturday morning. Sunday school at 12. C. E. at 5.45.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorsers who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twofold and confirmed, with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It's from a Weymouth resident.

Peter Fowler, 17 Norfolk street, Weymouth, says: "I suffered severely from a lame back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills made my back strong and regulated the kidney action. I recommend them to anyone suffering from the trouble I had." (Statement given May 5th 1913). On Mar 21st, 1915, Mr. Fowler said: "I have heavy lifting in my work, but am free from any sign of weak kidneys. I use Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally however and they keep my back strong and the action of my kidneys as it ought to be."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fowler had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

One Eye On Him

Lifting a Load of Woe and the Price It Cost.

By THOMAS GRANT SPRINGER
 Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Wilson glared viciously at the cook with murder in his heart and went on sullenly peeling potatoes. The fact that there were social conditions in the lower world into which ill fortune had cast him did not occur to him. He did not know that a dishwasher had no more right to give himself airs than a common seaman had to put himself on the same social footing with a captain.

He was not a dishwasher by choice, but of necessity, his empty stomach having driven him to accept food in recompense for his unskilled labor. The cook was in no wise to blame, for Wilson was indeed a poor dishwasher. The fact that his awkwardness had exasperated the cook almost beyond endurance had not occurred to him.

He did not take into account, as the cook did, the broken crockery, the careless slopping and the colossal awkwardness with which his associate had to contend. Viewed in his own light, the cook was a martyr to his own charity in putting up with Wilson for the three days' inconvenience that had marked what he considered his service.

The cook, as lord of his own dominion, had every right to reprimand an awkward scullion in whatever language he chose, and the fact that that language had been chosen from a vocabulary that was scarcely conducive to palatable pleasure in an atmosphere of culinary preparation had not occurred to the cook. He was used to bad scullions. Wilson was not used to bad cooks, at any rate not in such intimate relation as he had lately found himself.

Therefore he resented the cook's treatment of him and under the abuse and indignation heaped upon him smoldered a fire against humanity in general, and the cook in particular.

It was small wonder, then, as the cook came by and observed that, even with mechanical aid, Wilson was making a huge blunder of his task, he should give vent to his scorn in a personal analysis of Wilson that began with his ancestors, disparaged his present estate and painted in lurid hues his probable eternal future. There was a possibility that even this would not have loosened the floodgates of Wilson's wrath if the discourse had not culminated in the cook's emphasizing his remarks by bringing a frying pan in violent contact with the offender's head.

Wilson arose blind with dirty water and wrath, wiped the one from his eyes and allowed enough of the other to drift out of his optics until they brought him at length to the outskirts of the railroad yards. The sight of the racing switch engines awoke his numbed senses to one certain fact—he must get out of town!

The red glare of the cook's vacant socket haunted him and bade him flee from retribution. The fact that he had no money and no clothes only added to his desire to put miles between him and the consequences of his deed. All resentment faded from his mind. There was nothing he would not have given to undo what his mad wrath had accomplished. He must go.

Arrest, the hand of the law, was as nothing to his conscience and the red-eyed horror that must ever stare at him with its hideous vacuity. He must find new scenes in which to forget it.

At the edge of the yards he came upon a switch shanty. The door was open, and the coats and hats of the night shift hung upon its dim walls, inviting him to clothe himself for the journey. Wilson slipped quickly in, seized one of each, regardless of size or fit, clothed himself and drifted up the main line.

A freight was just pulling out. He had no idea of its destination; that was no matter, but it was moving, moving away from the scene of his horror. He grasped a door sill as it ran past him, swung in on the rails with the ease of long practice and soon the whine of the wheels was drowning in his ears as the train rocked and swayed along in the night, bearing him away, away, away. But still he could not shut out the red stare of the sightless socket that seemed to haunt him, a hideous ghost of the living consequences of a mad impulse.

It was this incident more than anything else that put an end to Wilson's vagabondage and humbled his foolish pride until at length he sat before the parental board where the veil had been kept hot for him.

A year, two years passed, and as the dust of each respectable day settled down upon his disreputable past his life as a knight of the road hid itself under the pleasant gray coating and became a dim and dingy memory until all its tawdry details faded into a misty hulk which the kindly ashes of time covered with oblivion.

But one thing stared and glared at him out of the past—the sightless socket that was more of an evil eye than any sorcerer of fable possessed. The material success that awaited him on his homecoming was not bright enough to dim that ghoulish memory. The more his fortunes improved the more insistent became its gaze.

No murderer was more persistently haunted by the ghost of his victim than was Wilson by this living specter. It peered into his privacy, it leered at him when he surrounded himself with society. Always he knew that some living man was carrying about the thing he had killed—that that man was the walking tomb of a darkness that he, Wilson, had created in red wrath.

Love came to him, but could not blind him to the horror of the past. He feared to accept the sweet promise that a woman modestly held out to him for fear that their very union might culminate in a terror more persistent than the one he lived in. He could see his child born with that awful badge of his mental vision materialized in a baby face branded at birth with a sightless socket to perpetuate his punishment. That was the final pressure on his crown of thorns.

Again the wanderlust stirred in him, and he packed his grip, arranged his letters of credit and once more took to the road, this time fortified by a bank account and with the excuse of a wider field for the success that he had made.

And so the eye became a restless goad, driving him hither and thither with its evil ray that seemed like the light of a red star traveling through time. From city to city he wandered, always away from the scene of his evil adventure, until at last he walked the thoroughfare of a city divided by a continent from his Nemesis, as he thought. And then fate confronted him.

Faithlessly dressed, radiating an atmosphere of material prosperity, he was strolling aimlessly, seeking distraction in the passing crowd, when suddenly his eye caught the profile of the cook's face. He was on the left side, and the socket was filled with a glass eye glaring with a dead, unwinking, unforgiving stare.

The cook had altered sadly. Fortune had evidently laid a heavy hand upon him, for his bovine bulk had shrunk with the reducing flesh until his shabby clothes hung limply upon his form as upon a rack. Wilson noted that his shoes were dilapidated and his whole appearance that of one who was treading hard ways.

He walked close to him, hoping he was mistaken, but there was no denying the familiarity of the features stamped so indelibly upon his memory. He had fled from fate, and it had pursued him, for the fixed stare of the artificial substitute that concealed his ghostly horror seemed to hypnotize him into following.

He crossed behind to the cook's right side and came close beside him. The good eye regarded the well-dressed stranger with curiosity, but no recognition, but Wilson was certain that this was the man.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but didn't you cook in a restaurant in Galesburg some years ago?"

The cook regarded him with amazement. "Sure," he replied, "but I don't know you, and you don't look much like any one who ever ate there."

"Never mind that," interrupted Wilson. "I thought you cooked there."

"I wish I did now." And the cook's tone expressed regret.

"Why?" demanded Wilson.

"Well, when I cooked I was sure of eating."

"And now you are not?"
 "I'm out of a job and a long way from home." And there was a finality in his tone as if it had all been said.

"You had better come and dine with me," proposed Wilson, "and then you can tell me how you came to leave there."

"You mean it?" And the cook looked him over with surprise.

"I certainly do." And Wilson led the way into a fashionable restaurant, while the cook followed somewhat doubtfully.

When the ill assorted pair were seated at a quiet table the cook's embarrassment faded under the soothing influence of the first courses, which were too far above any of his own culinary skill to attempt anything but their dispatch.

"Stranger," he remarked, fixing Wilson with his one good eye, "I'd like to know what your name is and what your little game is."

"My name would do you no good and convey nothing to you, and my game is merely to help a man from Galesburg who is a long way from home and down on his luck."

The cook looked at him puzzled, and then launched into general gossip about the town which did not interest Wilson, and personal gossip about himself that did.

It seemed that he had longed for a change and, relying on his ability to get work, had wandered farther than he realized, until the grip of misfortune had left him stranded in a strange city.

"And you want to get back?" inquired Wilson as the cook's narrative ended with the coffee.

"I certainly do, stranger, for I've a job any time I get home, which is more than I've been able to get here."

"Then home you go," and Wilson rose and led the way to the street, "but you can't leave for home in those clothes," and before the astonished cook could regain his senses he was being outfitted from head to toe in a first class men's haberdashery, while Wilson calmly paid the bills.

The cook's lone eye gleamed with satisfaction as he surveyed himself in the long mirror when they turned again into the street where a taxicab stood waiting Wilson's telephoned order. As the two were being whirled to the depot the cook turned to Wilson and spoke as one would speak to a dream vision he was afraid of dissipating with his voice.

"See here, stranger, this all seems like it's on the square, but how am I going to repay you?"

"By going back to Galesburg and being happy," said Wilson earnestly.

"I'll do that," the cook replied, "but I want your name and address so I can send you what you've given me as soon as I can earn it."

"Never mind that now. Here we are, and it lacks but a few minutes of train time," and Wilson hurried him to the ticket office, bought his ticket and Pullman reservation and rushed him through the gate. As they stood on the platform he pulled out a roll of bills and, peeling off two twenties, said, "Here are your traveling expenses."

The cook turned them over in his hand, and a mist dimmed his good eye.

"I don't know what to say to all this," and his voice was husky, "but this is the happiest moment of my life, and you've got to give me your name and address and tell me why you did all this."

Wilson took his arm and led him to his car. It lacked but a minute of train time. "My friend, don't you know my face?" he asked slowly.

The cook gazed at him searchingly. "There's something familiar about it, but—no, I don't know you."

"Once you had a dishwasher who threw a potato knife that tore out your left eye," said Wilson slowly.

"Now I know you," and a wide grin overspread the cook's face. "Why, sure," he said. "I wondered why you skipped."

"But the eye?" demanded Wilson.

The conductor shouted "All aboard," the porter rushed the cook up the steps, and the train moved off, leaving Wilson staring after it.

But as he turned to buy his own ticket home the price he had paid for his peace seemed all too cheap.

the Mystery

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Harley and Rogers, investigating lawyers, faced each other in some dismay.

"A murder case," remarked Harley at last. "That's rather out of our line, isn't it?"

"Just because no one has brought one to our doors. We've taken everything in sight so far," grinned Rogers.

"Then we won't let this one get by,
eh? Good thing it's vacation time.
Now tell me what Dr. Hibbert had to say about the matter."

"I found him waiting in the office when I arrived this morning. He said that he had a curious story to tell me.
It seems he has been attending a patient, Emory Armstrong, who lives in a dilapidated house on the Freeman road. Armstrong was a middle aged man of eccentric habits and lived alone with a hired man, a Swede of the name of Lindquist."

"Armstrong had money or was reputed to be a miser, but his house appeared poverty stricken. He always paid the doctor with grumbling reluctance."

"Armstrong had been sick for some time, nothing dangerous apparently, merely a low malarial fever. He was so much improved that Hibbert decided he need not come any more."

"When he went to pay his last visit last night the man Lindquist met him at the door and said that his employer was unconscious. The doctor found Armstrong had been dead for several hours. Investigation showed that the man had been shot through the heart as he lay in bed."

"The shot had penetrated bedcloth-ing and all, and yet there were no powder marks from a gun pressed against the bedding."

"Lindquist appeared stupefied when told that his employer was dead. He admitted that he had been away all night and had just returned. Hibbert came directly to us and has now gone to notify the police authorities."

"Where is Lindquist?" asked Harley.
"Oh, Hibbert left the man alone there. Rather an odd thing to do under the circumstances."

"Of course Hibbert's reputation is impeccable," remarked Harley, reaching for his hat. "Coming with me?"

"Yes, I'd like to beat the police to it. My car is below."

The young lawyers went down to the street and entered Rogers' low swung racing car. In fifteen minutes they were turning into the neglected grounds surrounding the Armstrong house. They were quite extensive, and the masses of shrubbery furnished excellent hiding places for any one prowling around bent on mischief.

The house itself, once a lofty colonial mansion with pillared porticoes and many wings, was in a tumbledown condition.

There was no sign of life around the place, and Rogers could not help a sudden tightening of heartstrings when he recollected that the murderer might be concealed where he could pick them off one at a time as they entered the house.

The same thought occurred to Harley, and he was glad they were both armed with automatic weapons.

Rogers lifted the ancient brass knocker and rapped gently.

If Lindquist was on guard he would answer at once.

The knock reverberated as though through empty rooms.

"What was that sound?" asked Rogers. "It sounded like a laugh!"

"Harley had heard it too."
"Perhaps the Swede has gone insane," he suggested and turned the doorknob.

The door opened halfway and then stopped.

The two men entered and almost fell over the squat form of a man huddled on the floor in a pool of blood.

"It is Lindquist—shot in the back!"
muttered Rogers as he got up from his knees.

"It has just happened," Harley touched his companion's arm. "The murderer may still be here," he breathed.

Weapons in hand, they searched the lower rooms, finding only dust and decay, except in the kitchen, which bore evidence of being in daily use.

On the second floor only one room was habitable. This was the one in which the dead man lay.

This was a lofty chamber furnished in the black walnut "period" of forty years ago. There was every evidence of comfort here, the bookcases running over with volumes. The well equipped writing desk, with its scattered papers and fine reading lamp, denoted that Emory Armstrong had spent much of his time in his own apartment.

But the quiet occupant of the room!
The two young men turned back the sheet and looked upon a noble countenance.

A hasty examination of the room showed nothing to indicate there had been a struggle.

The big bed stood almost in the center of the room, and it had been made up with the pillows at the foot, under a hanging lamp.

"So he could read in bed," explained Rogers. "There was a book near his head when the doctor found him."

At that instant there was a confusion below stairs. The coroner and his associates had arrived. Dr. Hibbert was with them.

The two young men went downstairs and found them crowded around Lin-quist's body.

"Well?" asked Hibbert eagerly.
Rogers shook his head. "We've only just come," he explained.

"It's a clear case," said the coroner.
"This man killed his employer and has committed suicide."

"Shot himself in the back?" asked Rogers. "We found no weapon either."

Harley and Rogers met a battery of unpleasant glances.

Dr. Hibbert hastened to explain their presence on the scene, but the young investigators were given to understand that their presence was both untimely and quite unofficial.

The coroner and his associates were eager to have the investigation to themselves and felt jealous of the interference of the two young lawyers.

They scorned the theory of a third person being involved, though Rogers told them about the uncanny laugh which had followed their first knock upon the door.

"You find the laugh, young fellow," grinned the police detective, "and I'll get the chief to appoint you on the detective bureau."

"Done!" exclaimed Rogers confidently, and he withdrew with his partner, while the others went on upstairs.

"How about the laugh?" queried
Harley as they stood in the kitchen.

"We must find the woman," said Rogers.

"The woman?"

"Yes. There's a woman somewhere around the place. Why? She has been down and made some tea. The pot is still warm. There are the dregs in a cup. Armstrong is dead, and Lindquist probably did not make the tea. Men fly to strong liquors in times of stress. This tea was being made when we entered the house."

"Where is she?" asked Harley. "All the doors are bolted on the inside, even the door leading to the cellar."

"We might try the attic. These back stairs will take us up there."

Rogers led the way up a narrow, dusty flight of stairs. Once he paused and searched the treads with his flashlight.

Plainly visible in the dust were the imprints of a small stockinged foot.

"We are on the right track," said Harley.

The stairs ended in a small hall on the second floor, and, opening another door, they discovered a dusty flight winding upward.

Now they walked cautiously, guns in hand. Under the low roof the attic divided into several rooms.

Harley and his companions had not taken ten steps before they heard once more that wild laugh.

They peered through a half open door.

The room was directly over Armstrong's sleeping apartment.

In the middle of the floor a board had been removed, and beside the hole kneelt a woman. She was a small creature, bent with years and illness. Gray hair hung in tangled locks about her wrinkled face, and her large, dark eyes were wild and glittering as she lifted her head and regarded the two men.

Then, without comment on their intrusion, she bent over the hole and appeared to look down.

Rogers silently placed himself where he could lean over and look down also.

He saw the lath and plaster of the bedroom ceiling and a white point of light that streamed up through a small hole.

Below that hole was the bed where the body of Armstrong was found with a bullet in his heart, and the hole in the ceiling was right above his heart!

Suddenly the hole was obscured, and,
to Rogers' horror, he saw that the woman had covered it with the muzzle of a revolver.

With a signal to Harley, they both leaped for her and tore her away from the hole.

She fought like a tigress, and again and again her wild, insane laughter echoed through the house.

The men below came tearing upstairs and secured the raving woman. It was Dr. Hibbert who identified her.

"It is Armstrong's manic wife," said the physician. "For years she has been confined in the Leeds asylum. I did not know she had escaped, and I did not connect her with the crime."

"It is plain to be seen now how she accomplished her deed. She concealed herself here and made a small hole in the ceiling close to the hook in the middle of the plaster centerpiece. From this hook the lamp was suspended."

"As for Lindquist, she probably surprised him and killed him as he tried to escape. If our friends, Harley and Rogers, had not traced the laugh it is very likely that she would have got one or more of us."

As the mad woman was led screaming to the patrol wagon in which the officers had arrived Dr. Hibbert turned to the detective in charge.

"How about your promise, Smith?"
he asked. "My friends here traced the laugh."

The detective shook hands with Harley and Rogers.

"The next case you have, my friends," he said, "will have the backing of the detective bureau."

"Not if I know it," grinned Rogers as they left the house. "But I'll tell you one thing—I don't want another murder case."

"Well turn down the next one," agreed Harley as the car sped toward the city.

But it was to happen that the next case they handled touched them so intimately that they could not help being involved in the most mysterious crime of the decade.

FAME OF CAPE COD.It Is Many Sided and Fairly Eclipses Poor Cape Ann.

Cape Cod, aside from its shape, has a name to conjure with. What more appropriate? Cod is the palladium of our liberties. We have made unto ourselves a graven image thereof and have hung the same in our statehouse as a memorial forever. Our senior senator and the various congressmen from down Essex way never let the sacred fish go out of their thoughts.

Indeed, Cape Ann is just as anxious over the cod as the other cape is and probably wishes it had a similar chance at the name. The name of Cape Ann doesn't mean anything now, whatever it meant to the flattering colonists who first wished the then monarch's name on it.

Cape Ann doesn't look like a human foot. In fact, it doesn't look like much of anything but Cape Ann. But Cape Cod, with its sands, its bars, its long tongues and spits, is distinctive. People try to swim to it. A certain kind of aristocracy is named for it. Its people get into books and then sue the publishers. The pilgrim fathers landed on it and then had the supreme good sense to get back to the boats and hunt up Plymouth, where there was at least a rock to set historic feet upon, so that future generations might chip off bits of the same.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

The Great Big Moon.

The full moon is very deceptive to those who attempt to estimate its apparent size in the sky. Most people would assert that the "great big moon" could entirely blot out the lovely cluster of the Pleiades, which glitters in the constellation of Taurus, but actually the full moon could, and occasionally does, pass through the Pleiades and only succeeds in hiding a few of the stars comprising it. So small indeed is the moon when in its full phase it dominates the night sky that a three penny piece held at arm's length will completely eclipse it.—Fall Mall Gazette.

An Apology.

"Your customs are reprehensible beyond possibility of expression. The idea of killing your fellow man for dinner?"

"Yes," replied the cannibal, who had been reading about civilized warfare, "but at least we have the excuse of being hungry."—Washington Star.

Nobody Knows.

"What darn fool fashion will the women take up next?" asked the man who doesn't like the things they are wearing now.

"If I were a good enough guesser to predict that," replied his friend, "I'd be a multimillionaire inside of six months."—Chicago Herald.

The Chief Butcher.

"How far ahead can you go with your family, Jones?" his inquisitive friend asked.

"Oh, I never worry about my family. What bothers me is how far back I can manage to go with my tailor."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Ancient Scottish Custom.

In the Scottish highlands in olden times a burning wooden cross was carried blazing to and fro among the clansmen to rouse them to battle.

Andaman Islands Custom.

Natives of the Andaman islands show respect for the memory of deceased relatives by preserving their teeth and wearing them as necklaces.

Forcing Vegetable Growth.

Experiments with forcing vegetable growth by electric lights have shown that flaming arc lamps produce the best results, as they give off carbonic acid gas, a natural plant food.

Methodist Episcopal Church Notes

The regular meeting of the Epworth League on Sunday evening will be in charge of Miss Grace Carlton. The topic will be "Our Nearest Home Mission Field." Ref. Acts 1:8; 8:5-8; Luke 10:1, 2.

The next meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be held on Friday afternoon, December 3rd, at the home of the president, Mrs. Cemira Raymond on High Street.

Congregational Church Notes.

The Christian Endeavor meeting, Sunday evening, will be held at 6 o'clock, and will be in charge of the Missionary Committee. The topic will be: "Home-Mission Work To Be Done In Our Community."—Ref. Luke 14:15-24.

A Union Thanksgiving service was held in the church on Thursday morning at 7.30. The program was arranged by the C. E. Society of the Congregational Church and the Epworth League of the Methodist Church. There was special music, instrumental and vocal, and the speakers for the meeting were Miss Mary J. Marden of the Epworth League and Arthur T. Rousseau of the Christian Endeavor, while many others contributed to the success of the meeting.

A definite plan was decided upon on Monday evening, for the forming of an "Efficiency Committee" for the church by a representative body of the organizations of the church.

Twenty-four of the teachers in the Sunday school gathered on Monday evening at the church. A supper was served by the teachers of the Primary department at 6.15. Following the supper, the regular business meeting was held and plans made for the Christmas Party. A committee was appointed to take charge of a Christmas concert, to be given by the Sunday school. These meetings are held regularly each month.

The church sent out 27 Thanksgiving baskets to the elderly and shut-in members of the parish. The In-as-much circle

The Woman's Missionary Society will hold its next meeting on Friday afternoon, December 3rd, at the home of Mrs. Winslow M. Tirrell on Hawthorne Street. The leader will be Mrs. Frank M. Coffin and the subject, "Social Christianity In India and Burma."

WORKING THE WIRELESS.

The Jump From Long Island Over the Ocean to Germany.

The wireless station at Sayville, N. Y., is the most powerful in the world, flashing messages direct to Nauen, near Berlin.

Fifty miles out from New York City is Sayville, a small town whose principal industries are roadhouses and wireless telegraphy. Here the automobile parties stop for the few bites that always take many dollars before running on into New York, but if it were not for the wireless station the town would never be heard of.

Near the ocean, dropped in a mosquito infested field, the great Telefunken station sprawls over 100 acres. A mile away it looks like a huge spider web, with all its slim poles reaching into the air, interlaced with slender wires.

The little low building is rigged on every side with towering poles—antennae, as they are called. Five hundred feet high they stand almost as tall as the Washington monument.

From these wires radiate the electric waves that leap to Germany. Great blocks of cement, big as corncribs, are set in the ground, and to them are anchored the guy wires.

The message is flashed across the Atlantic at the rate of twenty-five words a minute, but in case of necessity it can go up to forty. The messages go across in a series of waves, with which the station on the other side is in tune.

The messages go to a small town near Berlin called Nauen, where they are placed in a land wire and forwarded to the capital. The charge for sending a message to Germany is 53 cents a word from anywhere near New York. The 3 cents is the price of the land wire to get it to Sayville.

As soon as the key is touched in America the message is in Germany, the time occupied in crossing being only the fraction of a second. In fact, the message could go around the world seven times in a second.—Homer Croly in Leslie's.

COMPETITION IN SAVING.

A Challenge a Wife Accepted and a Contest in Economy.

The following is an account of what competition did toward encouraging a bank account:

"I am on a newspaper. I have always made a salary in excess of simple living requirements, but I was a free spender and did not save.

"A baby came, and I felt an added responsibility. I was afraid—actually frightened for the first time in my life. Then I gave the matter of saving some thought, but I could not decide upon any course of action.

"At the office one day a business discussion made me see that what I needed in my home was competition.

"That night on my arrival home I said to my wife that I would, beginning the next Saturday, give her half of my salary and I would keep the other half, and we each take an equal share of the household expenses.

"At the end of the first month I left my bank book on the library table. I wanted to surprise her. That evening she handed it to me and said she thought I was doing fine. Looking at her closely, I saw that she realized she was challenged. She did not speak, however, of any intention she might have had in mind.

"A month later I found her bank book on the library table identically as I had left mine. She had benten me, for her savings showed $10.50 more than my own for the corresponding month and $15 in excess of my deposits for the first month.

"We are now in a race. We both have the saving habit. We have enough to buy a home if we should join funds."—American Magazine.
